U.S. Will Give Full Publicity To Monopoly Prosecutions

President May Submit Message on Stronger Statutes Today.

Arnold Suggests 'Criminal' Process

Cummings' Aide Calls Civil Court Actions 'Ineffective.'

Business and Monopoly.

President Roosevelt whipped into message form recommendations for strengthening anti-monopoly laws and supplying guide-lines for competitive business.

Assistant Attorney General Arnold announced a publicity policy on future anti-trust prosecutions as a guide and a warning to trade. Partial Text Page 11.)

The President was said to be considering creation of an "inner council" of business men to study and make recommendations on economic problems. Page 2.

Message Is Drafted.

By Robert C. Albright.

Recommendations by the President for strengthening anti-monopoly laws and supplying guide-lines for competitive trade yesterday were whipped into message form at the White House for possible Congressional consideration this session.

New light on the President's monopoly proposals was supplied last night by Assistant Attorney General Thurman Arnold. The chief of the Justice department's anti-trust division announced a publicity policy on future anti-trust prosecutions as a guide and a warning to business.

In a speech before the Trade and Commerce Bar Association in New York City, the former Yale University law professor said public statements by the Justice Department on individual prosecutions will define the Government's application of anti-trust principles. He said these statements might well point the way to remedial legislation on particular problems, rather than "general formulae."

Criminal Action Urged.

"Our ideal is already well stated in the Sherman law," said Arnold. "It only requires particular application."

The assistant attorney general stressed the "ineffectiveness" of civil action and favored anti-trust prosecutions in criminal rather than civil courts. He said the power of public investigation by the Justice Department might clarify its task.

Arnold yesterday attended a series of conferences at the White House on the framework of the President's message, along with Attorney General Homer S. Cummings, Solicitor General Robert H. Jackson and Benjamin Cohen, Administration attorney.

It was indicated the message may go to Congress today, or the President may decide to apply finishing touches after he leaves for Charleston, S. C., to embark on a "shakedown" cruise on the cruiser Philadelphia.

No attempt by the President to put through a comprehensive anti-monopoly program at this session is anticipated by Congressional leaders, who have hitherto predicted

Nazis May Pay Bonds to Jews For Properties

'Opportunity' Expected to Sell Businesses to 'Aryan' Bidders.

By the United Press.

Berlin, April 28.—The decree for registration of Jewish property in the Reich does not mean confiscation, well-informed Nazi circles declared tonight. It was indicated property rights would be respected in all transactions connected with Aryanization.

The object of the decree, this source said, is to speed up and organize Aryanization of Jewish business "hitherto conducted without method," and has been contemplated for some time.

It was considered likely Jews would be given an opportunity to sell their business to Aryan bidders.

The purchase price may be given them in bonds bearing interest guaranteed by the Reich.

Under present currency regulations the transfer of annuities from these bonds is not possible. However, the United Press informant said that, should the Reich's currency situation improve, it was possible Jews would be allowed to leave the country, the Reich undertaking to pay them annuities.

United States Ambassador Hugh R. Wilson arranged tonight to ask the government to clarify the scope of the decree, particularly as it affected Jews who are American citizens.

Foreign diplomats, surprised at the sweeping scope of Field Marshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering's decree and still uncertain as to its exact implications, indicated a conflict in interpretations of the 1935 German-American treaty of friendship might be brought to a head.

The question was raised as to whether the treaty, renewed in October, 1935, was involved, inasmuch as the decree might affect American citizens of Jewish origin who own property in Germany.

Leaders Seek End Today to Naval Debate

By the United Press.

Senate leaders last night announced they would attempt to end debate today on President Roosevelt's controversial naval expansion program which has been under fire for two weeks in one of the bitterest foreign policy fights since defeat of the Versailles Treaty.

Majority Leader Alben W. Barkley (Democrat), of Kentucky, announced that he intended to hold a session tomorrow and possibly one tonight in an effort to hasten action on the bill.

"I have for several days attempted to secure a limitation on debate without success," he said, "and, therefore, this action has become necessary."

President Blamed.

Senator Robert M. LaFollette (Progressive), of Wisconsin, told the Senate yesterday that 10 years ago Mr. Roosevelt enunciated principles in direct conflict with his present plan for a $1,157,000,000 Naval expansion program, and asserted that ultimate responsibility for America's entrance into the world armament race must be placed upon the President's doorstep.

Bitterly denouncing expenditure of billions for armaments in times of economic stress, LaFollette charged that the new Navy program was designed solely to implement a new American foreign policy to which the people were opposed.

He warned that the "real danger of war for the United States lies in our own foreign policy."

La Follette Fears War.

"Collective punitive security action has never yet succeeded in its objectives," he said, adding that boycotts and sanctions were useless gestures unless the nations imposing them were prepared to use force. "But if we consider ourselves the prosecuting judge of the world's morals, then we are almost certain to become the laughing stock of the world or become involved in a huge war," he said.

He asserted that "it is a burlesque of representative government" to leave formation of the foreign policy in the hands of the executive with-

Chorus Calls for Advance Pay, Delays Opera Here 40 Minutes

A threatened strike of the chorus of the New York Grand Opera Company whose members refused to perform until they had been paid for working in Baltimore tonight, delayed for 40 minutes last night a presentation of the opera, "Il Trovatore," in Constitution Hall.

A fashionable audience of 2,000 displayed polite displeasure.

The opera was sung later by a star cast headed by Rose Bampton, Metropolitan Opera Company headliner, after the principals, members of the orchestra and chorus lounged about the corridors backstage while representatives of several theatrical unions and the management argued over the demand.

Members of the cast insisted that all performers were entitled to pay for tonight's performance if the demand of the chorus was met.

Theodore Carr, agent for the American Guild of Musical Artists, one of the unions represented, insisted either payment to the entire cast be made or the demand of the chorus union be denied.

"So," said J. Franklin Viola, one of the managers of the performance, "we compromised with the chorus and paid them $200 for singing tonight."

Military Pool.

By the Associated Press.

London, April 28.—France and Great Britain, brought together by fear of the German war machine, reached full agreement today on pooling their military might in the event of a European explosion.

The interdependence of the two countries rapidly neared expression in a formal mutual assistance pact. Both were taking swift steps to put defenses in order and combine their resources in war-time.

French Premier Daladier, at the conclusion of the first of two days of conferences among British and French premiers and foreign ministers, declared:

"We arrived without difficulty at complete agreement. Without exaggeration, all conversations were most cordial, everyone being fully aware of and fully understanding the necessities we have to face.

Complete Accord.

"On all important points an accord has been reached—and on certain problems of vital interest never before obtained."

Technical staff talks between the land, sea and air forces of the two countries, to map details of strategy if diplomacy fails to avert a European conflict, were expected to begin shortly.

The French indorsed British Prime Minister Chamberlain's policy on easing European tension—founded on his counter weapon, the conditional British agreement with Italy.

The ministers put off until tomorrow the most dangerous immediate question—the problem of Czechoslovakia, where a Nazi Ger-

Birmingham, Ala., April 28 (AP).—A sizable representation of Alabama's Democratic leaders met a slight delay in their hand-shaking today—while Democratic Chieftain James Farley put in a call to Washington.

Rail Pay Cut Planned for Million Men

Rail executives, at Chicago, drafted a recommendation for reducing the wages of some 1,000,000 railway workers as a partial solution to the roads' financial difficulties. The unions have said they will not accept a cut.

Wage Cut Drafted.

By the United Press.

Chicago, April 28.—Directors of the Association of American Railroads, representing 142 class 1 carriers, today drafted a recommendation for reducing the wages of 1,000,000 railway workers as a partial solution to the industry's critical financial problems.

John J. Pelley, president of the board which met to draft a program for submission to the association's full membership tomorrow, said the board also discussed asking the Interstate Commerce Commission for new emergency freight rate increases, but "did nothing that would be newsy."

Pelley would not say specifically what wage reduction was recommended, but as the directors met there was discussion of the need for cutting pay rolls $260,000,000 annually.

For six-and-one-half hours the directors of the association met in executive session before Pelley made his announcement.

The call for today's meeting mentioned a 15 per cent wage cut.

Both wage cuts and increased freight rates had been cited by an association spokesman prior to Pelley's announcement as necessary to alleviate the railroads' crisis.

The spokesman said increased traffic lies outside the province of the association and depends upon "general business stimulation." The answer to the problem, he indicated, therefore, rests in conservation of revenue through reduced costs and increased earnings through higher rates.

"Wage cuts," according to George M. Harrison, chairman of the Railway Labor Executives Association, representing 21 labor groups, "are out of the question."

Mother of Baby Found in a Truck Is Located Here

Red-haired Rita Lowell, 19-year-old mother of a 7-week-old baby found abandoned in a truck near Greensboro, N. C., was in Washington last night.

She was found in the city two weeks after her disappearance from her New York home as military authorities at Fort Myer, who are holding a cavalry private in connection with the case, called in Department of Justice investigators.

Col. Jonathan M. Wainwright, commanding officer at Fort Myer, said no charges had been placed against the prisoner—Private Arthur Addleberger, attached to machine gun company of the Third Cavalry.

Meanwhile, the truck driver who said he had found the child, told North Carolina authorities Rita had given the infant to him.

Minton Seeks Curb on Press; Sarnoff Fears Curb on Radio

Senator Hits Publishers for Combining Demand for Free Press With a Blow at President's Use of Air to State Views.

Charging that free speech is being "throttled and strangled" in the name of the "free press" of the country, Senator Sherman Minton (Democrat), of Indiana, chairman of the Senate Lobby Committee, yesterday introduced a bill making it a felony "to publish as a fact anything known to be false."

SEN. MINTON.

Following an attack on several metropolitan newspapers, and on the American Newspaper Publishers Association, Minton offered his bill to fine publishers between $1,000 and $10,000, or imprison them for not more than two years, on conviction of knowingly publishing untruths.

Minton's bill, which was referred to the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee, would suspend use of the mails for six months to publications found guilty of such a felony.

The Indiana Senator opened his attack with a criticism of the American Newspaper Publishers Association committee report which he said recommended that "misuse" of the radio for political purposes be prohibited. He called the report "an exhibition of unmitigated gall."

"Of course," said the Indiana Senator, "it would be all right to use

R.C.A. Head Warns That Six-Month Licensing of Stations Opens Doors to an Insidious Censorship by Government.

New York, April 28.—David Sarnoff, president of the Radio Corporation of America, said today that the present system of granting 6-months licenses to broadcasting stations leaves the door open "for an indirect and insidious censorship."

SARNOFF.

Sarnoff, a pioneer in radio, spoke at the Town Hall luncheon in the Hotel Astor, and called for a vigilant maintenance" of freedom of thought and expression in the United States.

He pointed out that, while the law empowers the Federal Communications Commission to license broadcasting stations for periods not exceeding three years, the commission, in practice, grants licenses for only six months. Twice a year, therefore, the owner of the station, Sarnoff said, finds his investment in jeopardy.

Democracy Essential.

Both Houses Receive D. C. Suffrage Plea

Women Voters Convention Supports Amendment; Parade Is Tonight.

With suffrage adherents mustering strength on the eve of Washington's first march to the polls since 1871, the fight to enfranchise the District yesterday moved forward on several fronts:

On the floors of the Senate and House Senator Arthur Capper (Republican), of Kansas, and Representative Mary Norton (Democrat), of New Jersey, introduced a petition signed by 30 local civic leaders, calling for full citizenship for residents of the Capital.

In St. Louis the convention of the National League of Women Voters pledged support to a constitutional amendment empowering Congress to grant the District local self-government and national representation.

The Junior Board of Commerce completed plans for a torchlight parade and rally tonight to climax the campaign for a sweeping verdict in the unofficial ballot tomorrow.

William Green, A. F. of L. chief, urged organized labor of the District to make its strength felt at the polls in behalf of suffrage, while Congressional spokesmen and civic leaders appealed to radio audiences in the drive to get out the vote.

Participation in the referendum tomorrow might possibly result in a challenge to the right of Washingtonians who maintain their legal residence in West Virginia to vote in that State, Clarence W. Meadows, attorney general of West Virginia, advised Representative Jennings Randolph. Most legal opinion, however, held that a ballot in tomorrow's entirely unofficial "straw vote" could have no effect on voting privileges in the States.

AFL Charters Miners Union To Fight Lewis

Progressive Group, Long Fought by U. M. W., Is Taken Into Fold.

By the Associated Press.

The bitter war between the A. F. of L. and the C. I. O. moved into John L. Lewis' own back yard yesterday when the A. F. of L. executive council chartered a new coal miners' union to fight Lewis' United Mine Workers.

The Progressive Miners of America, an Illinois union which has fought the U. M. W. for six years, is to be the nucleus of the new organization.

Rioting, bloodshed, train-wrecking, bombings and sabotage have accompanied the battle between the two unions in Illinois. Labor observers predicted encounters between the two elsewhere might produce more violence.

Officers Designated.

Informed of the council's decision, and asked for comment, Lewis said, "not a word."

Black-haired Joe Ozanic, president of the Illinois Progressives, is to be temporary president of the new international union until it has its first convention. C. E. Pearcy, a native of Lucas, Iowa, where Lewis also was born, is to be temporary secretary-treasurer. Headquarters are to be established in Chicago, and the Illinois Progressives are to be chartered as District No. 1 of the new union.

Monday—3327 P street northwest, at the home of Miss Sylvia Meyer, to instruct a dance group interested in a square dance revival; Tuesday—Banneker Center, to assist the playground directors of colored schools in a program which will make it possible for more square dances to be taught at the playgrounds; Wednesday—Palisades Park, to assist the playground instructors for white schools in the same kind of program; Thursday—Palisades Park, with the Potomac Appalachian Club, and also at George Washington University with folk dancing instructors.

The festival will be held at Constitution Hall May 6, 7 and 8 under auspices of The Post. Tickets are now on sale on the first floor The Post building.

New Party Formed.

By the Associated Press.

Madison, Wis., April 28.—Gov. Philip F. LaFollette officially launched tonight a new national Progressive Party with a program which he said is intended to save America from a trend toward dictatorship by increasing the national wealth.

To 5,000 wildly cheering followers in the University of Wisconsin stock pavilion he announced the "decision"—reached after consultation with rank and file groups over the country.

About 2,000 persons who could not gain admittance to the assembly hall heard La Follette over a loud speaker system and he addressed them briefly afterwards.

Own Plans Unrevealed.

The Governor failed to disclose his personal plans—whether he will run for a fourth term or retire to lead the battle for organization of the new party, of which he now is the chief officer.

Building of the party into an effective organiztaion will start at Des Moines, Iowa, tomorrow. The Governor is scheduled for a radio broadcast there and will address a farm labor group at Cedar Rapids Saturday.

The Wisconsin executive, his hair disheveled and his face moist with perspiration during a two-hour speech, declared that a "black plague" is destroying the faith of Americans through failure to solve their economic problems and that it is the intention of the Progressives—no matter how long the fight—to turn the tide the other way.

Fast Day Ordered In 1681 Again Kept In New Hampshire

Concord, N. H., April 28 (AP).—New Hampshire today observed its unique holiday—Fast Day—first proclaimed 257 years ago, when the Governor ordered a day of public fasting and prayer in view of "sundry tokens of divine displeasure."

Another proclamation cautioned elders and ministers to keep watch to make certain the public carried out the fasting order.

It urged that the people "fervently wrestle with the Lord that He may turn from the fierceness of His anger and cause His face to shine upon us in all our concerns."

'We're on Spot,' Leader Put One Over, Says Ford

'Men Behind Government Are After Us,' He Tells U. S. Publishers.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 28.—A day after his closeted 2-hour talk with President Roosevelt, Henry Ford said tonight that "we are all on the spot" and that the people have "a leader who is putting something over on them."

Whether those two cryptic remarks, made in separate statements, were intended as answers to the ceaseless bombardment of questions about his visit to Washington yesterday, the elderly industrialist gave no hint.

Asked if his remarkably genial mood was attributable to his White House conversation, he replied with a smile: "Well, you never heard me say anything about the President, did you? What's the use? He's trying to do the best he can, like everybody else."

Says We're On the Spot.

Then tonight, in an enigmatic six-second, one-sentence speech at the Bureau of Advertising dinner for the American Newspaper Publishers Association convention, he added:

"We are all on the spot, and stick to your guns and I will help you, with the assistance of my son, all I can."

Asked to amplify that, he added: "We fellows are on the spot just as much as the press is on the spot. The whole thing is to kill competition."

Pressed further to say "who was putting whom on the spot," he said: "The men behind the Government, the powers that be, are after us just as much as they are after the press."

Self-Starters Needed.

Earlier in an interview, when W. J. Cameron, Ford Motor Company advertising chief suggested that "people ought to have self-starters," Ford picked up the thought.

"That's it," he haid. "People are looking for a leader. They ought to be their own leaders, but they're looking for a leader. And they've got a leader who is putting something over on them, and they deserve it."

Though those remarks seemed tinged with pessimism, Ford predicted economic improvement when industry and business begin revitalizing themselves.

Says People Must Wake Up.

"People must wake up and go to work" said Ford. "Too many people try to live off money. Money isn't wealth. It's just a token of wealth. We must create wealth and we must do it by doing something.

"There's plenty to be done in industry and it ought to be done now," Ford said. "Forty years ago people could not foresee all the work the invention and manufacture of automobiles was to bring. Now it's the same with other things. Everything, railroads, manufactories, farming, ought to be overhauled and improved."

'Hardships Strengthen Us.'

Hardships strengthen character, he said, and even the hardship of unemployment—"the worst in the world," he said—strengthens a person if that person suffers enough to be driven out of unemployment into work.

Someone asked Ford, who will be 75 on July 30, how his health was. He said it was good because he made it good and remarked that "if your health's no good it's your own fault." He safeguards his own by not overeating and by keeping busy he said.

He was not pessimistic about Europe, said he doesn't believe things are as bad as they are pictured, expressed his conviction people are not to be misled easily into war, and said he is going to England this summer to look over the 4,000-acre Essex County farm where "we are teaching England she can feed herself."

Labor Board Accused.

Covington, Ky., April 28 (AP).—The Ford Motor Co., in an affidavit filed in the Sixth United States Circuit Court of Appeals today, charged that the National Labor Relations Board was "improperly influenced by extraneous considerations, political and otherwise," in handing down its order against the firm to require compliance with the Wagner labor act.

The affidavit, prepared by Frederick H. Wood, of New York, Ford company counsel, sought continuance until the June session of a hearing scheduled for May 9, to permit the taking of depositions from 32 officers and attaches of the NLRB, including Chairman J. Warren Madden, of Washington.

Wood contended that "neither the board nor any member thereof heard, read or judiciously weighed or appraised the evidence in the proceedings before the board," which in January denied a rehearing of the case, based on the discharge of 29 workers for alleged union activity.

Ruling the case of Fred O. Morgan, a sheep commission man, against the United States and the Secretary of Agriculture, the court held as illegal an order issued by Rexford G. Tugwell fixing rates to be charged by market agencies at the Kansas City stockyards.

Washington Cleveland Aids D. C. Residents in Their Tours

District Manager for A. A. A. Reports His Members Reverse Tide of Visitors; He Guides Safety Legislation Campaigns.

By Christine Sadler

In addition to being the most visited people of the Nation, Washingtonians also set a right brisk visiting pace themselves, one gathers from a talk with Washington Irving Cleveland, manager of the District of Columbia Division of the American Automobile Association.

"We have between 25,000 and 26,000 members and they really get around," Cleveland affirms.

A young and energetic six-footer, Cleveland already has a row of civic accomplishments to his credit. Born in the District, he now lives in Kensington, Md., and accordingly splits his time and efforts between the two places. He is a past president of the Kensington Chamber of Commerce and of the Montgomery County Civic Federation, and is now a delegate to the Inter-Federation Conference of Citizens Associations which devotes itself to working out civic problems of Virginia, Maryland, and the District on a sort of reciprocal trade treaty basis.

Safety His Specialty.

He steers clear of any mention of a vote for the District by declaring he doesn't really live here any more. "I am voting in Maryland and very much interested in the county and State politics there. It would scarcely be becoming for me to join inthe vote controversy here," he says.

His main interest at present is his work with the A. A. A., where he makes a specialty of traffic safety problems, legislation affecting local motorists, and civic matters in which his organization is interested.

During this session of Congress he has worked in the name of his association for the followihg legislative changes: increased police force, compulsory inspection of motor vehicles, compulsory liability insurance for taxicabs, construction of a new Pennsylvania avenue bridge, an underpass at Thomas Circle, a grade separation at K street and Rock Creek drive, elimination of the traffic bottle-neck on Massachusetts avenue, safety responsibility for accidents costing less than $100, and a Dupont Circle underpass.

He Has Four Hobbies.

With exception of the last named, the association can point to a record of almost 100 per cent success. Cleveland asserts that the Dupont underpass was not a vital part of the program and that there is no hard feeling concerning its defeat.

Cleveland is man with four good hobbies, and is consistent in keeping up with all of them. His most unusual hobby is his interest in floral decoration for churches. Starting out on a very small scale, he is now one of the city's amateur experts on the subject.

Canoeing is the hobby which provides him with muscular exercise. Singing in the Washington Male Quartet gives him an artistic outlet, and motoring gives him a double pleasure. Besides its own intrinsic delight, it takes him to places he has bragged about to travelers coming to the A. A. A. for advice. This year he has his automobile headed toward California.

Cleveland was educated for the law, served in the World War, and is single.

On Monday—Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president of the Washington Board of Education, will be next in the "Working for Washington" series.

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt is considering creation of a new "inner council" of business men to study and make recommendations on economic problems, some of the more conservative advisers of the Chief Executive said yesterday.

Whether he actually would decide to set up such a council was not known, but it was said that "great pressure" was being exerted "both from within and outside the Administration" in behalf of the idea.

"Right wing" elements among the President's friends were arguing that such a step would tend to bring business men and the Administration closer together for a common attack on depression problems.

Four Mentioned for Posts.

Those reported to be under consideration for the proposed "council" include Brig. Gen. Robert E. Wood, of Chicago, president of Sears, Roebuck & Co.; Frank C. Walker, millionaire New York attorney, who was formerly a director of the National Emergency Council, and Robert W. Woodruff, president of the Coca-Cola Co.

The name of O. Max Gardner, former Governor of North Carolina, also was mentioned. Although primarily a lawyer, he is in touch with business problems as general counsel for the Cotton Textile Institute.

Gen. Wood Was Here in '35.

Three of the four men mentioned have been no strangers to Washington in recent years. Gen. Wood, an Army man from his graduation at West Point in 1900 through the World War, was called here early in 1935 to help supervise the spending of $4,000,000,000 as chairman of the Work Relief Advisory Committee. At the time he resigned the job after a brief period of service, reports were current among businessmen that he was not pleased with the handling of work relief.

Walker, a reticent figure who consistently kept out of the spotlight, was twice head of the National Emergency Council, a depression-born agency. When he resigned in 1935 he became acting head of a theater chain operating in Pennsylvania and New York State.

Gardner recently was mentioned prominently as a possible choice to be the first paid president of the New York Stock Exchange. He is a close friend of the President.

Woodruff has been president of Coca-Cola since 1923, in which job he has built up the company's business in foreign countries.

Ban Is Revoked On Ownership of Silver Privately

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt revoked today a 1934 proclamation requiring everyone to turn into the Treasury any silver not in the form of coin or needed for genuine industrial or artistic purposes.

Treasury officials said that practically all the silver involved had been purchased by the Treasury, at the rate of 50 cents an ounce, and the old regulations were revoked to simplify procedure in handling newly mined silver. The Treasury pays 64.64 cents an ounce for the newly mined stocks.

Under the nationalization program, 113,031,400 ounces of silver have been turned into the Treasury.

The Gallup Poll

La Follette Third Party Movement Seen as Facing an Unresponsive Public.

By Dr. George Gallup,
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

New York, April 28.—If a national third party springs out of the public meeting which the La Follette brothers held in Wisconsin tonight, it will face serious obstacles in "selling" itself to the voters. And if such a party were actually started it would constitute a greater threat to the Democrats than it would to the Republicans.

George Gallup.

These facts are revealed in studies of public opinion conducted during the last few weeks by the American Institute.

As everyone knows, a successful third-party movement receives its impetus from public dissatisfaction with existing party lines. But Institute surveys show that there is little or no inclination among either Republicans or Democrats to favor new party alignments at the present time. Seven out of every ten voters in both parties say they are satisfied with the existing Republican-Democratic division, believing, apparently, that these parties are adequate vehicles for the expression of opinion differences.

Recently the Institute asked, in a Nation-wide survey:

'Do you think the time has come to give up our two present political parties and have two new ones: one for conservatives, the other for liberals?

As the following table shows, the vote was an overwhelming "No."

	Yes.	No.
National	30%	70%
Republicans	26	74
Democrats	30	70

From the replies to a second question in the survey it is clear that a new third party would draw only a handful of Republican voters. Its principal support would come from the New Deal wing of the Democratic Party, especially in the lower-income groups.

The question was:

"If there were only two political parties, one for conservatives and one for liberals, which party do you think you would like to join?"

The conservative-liberal split among Republicans and Democrats was sharp and dramatic. Nearly all Republicans said they would identify themselves with the conservative party, whereas the large majority of Democrats would take up with the liberal party. It is from the latter group that a new liberal coalition might draw votes today, particularly if Southern conservative leaders of the present Democratic Party gain in power over party affairs.

	Favor Conservative Party	Favor Liberal Party
Republicans	85%	15%
Democrats	36	64

Farmer-Labor Party.

Observers have for many years been talking about the possibility of a new party based on the farmer-labor vote. In Oklahoma last week Mayor LaGuardia of New York predicted a realignment of parties, with conservatives and businessmen on one side and "farmers, laboring men and progressives" on the other.

Institute studies have found, however, that the opinions of the farmer and the working man differ so radically on many basic issues that a Farmer-Labor Party would have serious difficulty in attracting a substantial following of voters.

British Building Man Credits Boom to Private Enterprise

Great Britain's advance in home building was not a governmental device to save that country from economic disaster, but was brought about by private enterprise, a co-operative effort by home-financing institutions and large building organizations, encouraged by a government political and financial program.

In this way, Sir Harold Bellman, of London, president, International Congress of Building Societies, explained the British housing boom to 500 building and loan men and guests last night at the Mayflower Hotel. He spoke at a banquet held in his honor by the United States Building and Loan League concluding the eighth annual meeting of the league's southeastern conference.

Chairman and managing director of the world's second largest building society, he reviewed the United Kingdom's building program.

Societies Assets Gain.

"In less than two decades," he declared, "we have increased our available housing accommodations by nearly 50 per cent—building 3,500,000 houses in England and Wales since the Armistice. It was an expansion which has no parallel in our history. Once the decks had been cleared for confidence, the private builder without government assistance, re-started the wheels.

He said building societies financed 2,000,000 of the 3,500,000 new houses.

Building societies before the war, he recalled, were more or less localized organizations with assets of $325,000,000. Now, they stand among the foremost of that nation's institutions with combined resources of $3,500,000,000; more than 2,800,000 investors and 1,300,000 borrowers, and with an annual loan record volume of more than $500,000,000 in recent years.

"After the war," Sir Harold said, "we were faced with a chronic housing shortage, and up to the period of our financial crisis in 1931 we were chiefly occupied in making this good. The more significant part of the English housing output came, however, after the financial crisis. In the few years preceding 1931, English housing output was, on the average, below 200,000 per annum. By 1934 it had exceeded 300,000, and in 1936 it mounted to practically 350,000."

U. S. Measures Praised.

Edward C. Baltz, secretary of the Perpetual Building Association of this city, and president of the United States League, presided at the banquet and there were also remarks by Chairman John H. Fahey, Federal Home Loan Bank Board, and Senator Robert J. Bulkley, of Ohio, preceding Sir Harold's speech.

Robert E. Buckley, president, National Permanent Building Association and past president of the District of Columbia Building and Loan League, was elected a director of the Southeastern Conference, composed of the District and 11 States, at its closing session. George E. Comer, Bristol, Va., was elected president; George R. Wootten, Hickory, N. C., first vice president; Henry P. Irr, Baltimore, second vice president, and Alex Salvatori, Wheeling, W. Va., treasurer.

Dodd Challenges Smith on Pay Bill

By the Associated Press.

William E. Dodd, jr., Round Hill (Va.) candidate to succeed Representative Howard W. Smith (Democrat), Virginia, challenged his opponent yesterday to vote "yes" on reporting the wages and hours bill out of committee.

"I am advised," he said in a statement, "that the vote of Representative Smith will decide whether or not the Rules Committee will report the wages and hours bill. If Smith votes 'yes' the bill will come out. If he votes 'no' there will be no opportunity for the Congress to vote on the bill this session.

"As the candidate opposing Smith in the coming primaries in the Eighth Virginia District, I call upon Mr. Smith's sense of decency, fair play and his devotion, if any, to democratic principles, to see to it that by his vote the House of Representatives has at least the opportunity to express its conviction on wages and hours legislation."

The result? Crowns were judged far superior to every single brand ...smoother, milder, better tasting. Craftsmanship counts! For four generations the House of Seagram has been famous for the skill of its master blenders.

That's why the finer taste of Crowns is so popular today! Actually, over 129 million bottles of Crowns in all sizes have been sold since 1934.

Women Voters Ask Uniformity In Nuptial Laws

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, April 28.—The biennial convention of the National League of Women Voters, charting the organization's program for the next two years, today voted to support uniform marriage and divorce laws.

Although several State leagues have worked for such laws, this was the first time the league as whole had included them among its Nation-wide objectives.

The league's affirmation of support of the child labor amendment was reworded to permit backing other legisltion should the courts hold the measure void because of the length of time it has been under consideration by State Legislatures.

In past years, one of the league's aims has been "removal of remaining administrative and legal discriminations which prevent women from having an effective equality with men."

"Giving up the yardstick of men's activity," at the recommendation of Mrs. Edith Valet Cook, of New Haven, Conn., the convention deleted the reference to "effective equality with men." It pledged the league to continue work for "specific legislation" to remove discriminations against women.

At the same time, the delegates opposed the proposed "equal rights" amendment to the Constitution as "blanket legislation" which would throw existing law into confusion.

On the subject of public finance, the delegates called for "sound relationships" between income and expenditures. Doris Haney Jones, of Santa Monica, Calif., said there was a "tendency on the part of the league to have a bifurcation of mind—that taxation is something to be reduced and services something to be increased."

In general, the convention approved measures having a history of long-time league support. They included the league's No 1 objective—"qualified personnel in public service."

Clubwomen Urge State to Increase School, Jail Funds

Roanoke, Va., April 28 (AP).—Virginia clubwomen today recommended a redistribution of State funds to provide for more adequate school and jail systems, a general revision of taxes calculated to stimulate business, and indorsed the Hull reciprocal trade treaties.

Mrs. N. R. Hoyle, State education chairman, hit at "a lop-sided distribution" of present State revenues that result "in the neglect of older departments" of the administration, with no increase in funds set aside for the public schools, jails and public welfare.

Dr. Hugh H. Trout, Roanoke, member of the cancer committee of the Medical Society of Virginia, warned the clubwomen against the use of tobacco, saying that while he "made no statement to the effect that tobacco causes cancer, far more men than women have ulcers of the stomach; and stomach ulcers, which may develop into cancer, are definitely linked to the use of tobacco."

Danville, Va., April 28 (AP).—Harry Wooding, oldest mayor in the United States, looked forward today to another active year as head of Danville's city government. He was 94 yesterday.

Wage-Hour Bill Faces Shelving Attempt Today

Measure Will Get Speedy Action Unless Set Aside by Rules Committee.

By the Associated Press.

The wage-hour bill, much desired by the Roosevelt Administration, is expected to encounter a crucial test today, when opponents will seek to have the House Rules Committee pigeonhole it.

The powerful committee arranged to make its decision on the bill after hearing the opponents. If the committee decided to give the bill right-of-way the measure would go to the House floor almost at once. If it should decide adversely, many thought the bill would receive no further consideration at this session of Congress.

Chairman Norton (Democrat), of New Jersey, of the Labor Committee, which has had the measure in charge, explained to the Rules Committee yesterday the revisions that have been made and asserted that the House should be given an opportunity to vote it "up or down."

The old bill would have established an administrative board with authority to impose minimum wages of 40 cents an hour or less and maximum hours of 40 a week or more on industry.

In the new bill the board, much criticized, has been dropped. The legislation would simply specify that minimum wages would be 25 cents for the first year, increasing to 40 after the third. Maximum hours would be set at 44 the first year and drop to 40 after two years.

State Executives Attend Opening Today at Jessups

Jessups, Md., April 28 (AP).—Gov. Harry W. Nice and a number of prominent administration officials will attend the opening here tomorrow of the State police department's new $35,000 modern substation.

The new station is located on the Washington-Baltimore boulevard adjacent to the House of Correction.

Officers from Substation "A" at Laurel, which will be abandoned, moved into the new "A" headquarters at midnight tonight.

Md. G. O. P. Women Plan Affiliation

Annapolis, Md., April 28 (AP).—The Federation of Republican Women of Maryland, at their annual spring rally here today, heard reports from five state department officials, agreed to consider joining a national federation, and were urged to vote for the pending income tax amendment to the State constitution.

William H. Blakeman, State Budget Director; Harry Mertz, State Purchasing Agent; J. Milton Patterson, executive secretary, Board of State Aid and Charities; Harry O. Levin, chairman, State Tax Commission, and Harry C. Jones, State Employment Commissioner, were the luncheon guests of the Federation. They reviewed the work of their departments at the afternoon session.

The Federation meeting in the House of Delegates chamber of the State House, adopted a resolution offered by Mrs. Annette P. Fisher, president of the Prince George's County Federation, providing they consider the advisability of becoming affiliated with other state bodies in a national federation.

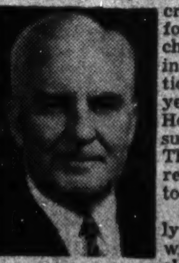
House Sub-committee Votes to Unseat Rep. Jenks in Favor of Alphone Roy.

Unseating of Representative Arthur B. Jenks (Republican), of New Hampshire, and giving his position to Alphone Roy, Democratic nominee for the Manchester district in the last election, was voted yesterday by a House Elections sub-committee. The committee report will go to the House.



REP. JENKS.

Roy originally was declared winner in the election by 550 votes but a recount was made and resulted in a tie. The ballot law commission after a review gave the place to Roy, by 17 votes. Jenks contended 34 ballots were missing at Newton, N. H. The commission recounted the entire vote, agreed that 34 ballots were missing and were for Jenks and awarded him the seat by 10 votes, according to the Associated Press. The House directed its committee to look into the Newton situation, and its vote yesterday followed.

No hope was held out yesterday by Chairman Mansfield (Democrat), of Texas, for action at this session on legislation to authorize completion of the canal across Florida. He said his Rivers and Harbors Committee, which last year favorably reported a bill to that end, was not pressing for action now, and it was doubtful whether the Rules Committee would give it right of way. He told the Associated Press he thought the project would have a better chance next session, as members had told him they would not vote for the canal before the 1938 elections.

The House Interstate Commerce Committee favorably reported an Administration bill to create a three-man "civil aeronautics authority" with rate-making and quasi-judicial powers similar to the Interstate Commerce Commission to regulate commercial and private flying.

Budget Balance Up to Business, Farley Insists

Will Come Quickly if Industry Co-operates, He Tells Alabamans.

By the Associated Press.

Montgomery, Ala., April 28.—James A. Farley, National Democratic Chairman, tonight declared a balanced Federal budget would come quickly if business co-operated with Government, but slowly if the country was "scared into panic" by foes of the President.

"Until business is ready to take over the problem of general reemployment the Government has no option but to continue the job," he added in an address prepared for delivery at a Democratic dinner here. "That is all that the relief measures now before Congress propose or intend."

Farley charged unlimited campaign funds were being "poured out all over the country" in an effort to discredit the Roosevelt Administration in this year's Congressional elections.

"The Liberty League may be dead," he said, "but its money bags go marching on and are at the disposal of the various organizations masquerading under such titles as the National Committee to Uphold Constitutional Government."

He declared experts had told him $500,000 already had been spent in fighting the Administration.

In an address earlier today before the Birmingham (Ala.) Traffic and Transportation Club, Farley predicted business would become a "real partner" with Government in a fight on "the forces of deflation." He also said he believed the time had come for "teamwork" between the Government and public utilities.

Police Quiz Men Caught in Trap About Other Robberies.

Police yesterday prepared to question three young white men, arrested early yesterday as they attempted to hold up the cashier of the Capital Transit Bus terminal at Fourteenth and Buchanan streets northwest, to determine their connection with other hold-ups and housebreakings in the District in the last eight months.

The trio captured by police detectives armed with sawed-off shotguns, were held in separate precincts, for investigation while police sought a fourth accomplice, believed to be the driver of the getaway car.

Capture of the trio came after a week-long vigil at the bus terminal. Inside the building were Lieut. John Fowler, and Sergt. E. E. Thompson. Covering the outside were Detective Sergts. J. J. Tolson and Elmer Lewis.

The hold-up men pulled up in a sedan. Two men entered and one stood outside.

The two men asked change for a $20 bill. As the cashier, Matthew Ramisch, of 5408 First street northwest, turned, one of the men drew a pistol and ordered Ramisch to "Stick 'em up and stand back!"

Lieut. Fowler and Sergt. Thompson ordered the gunman to drop his weapon. The men surrendered as Sergts. Tolson and Lewis moved up to cover the only entrance. The look-out man was captured a few minutes later.

The men gave their names as Gordon Albert Schofield, 26, 900 block First street northwest; William James Glynn, 27, 1506 E street southeast, and Winston Howard, alias "Chinaboy" Andrews, 310 Third street northwest. All three, according to police records, have served prison sentences.

Historic Wakefield In Albemarle Is Sold

Charlottesville, Va., April 28.—Wakefield, 522-acre estate near Earlysville, in northern Albemarle, has been sold by its owner, L. A. Dovell, to Mrs. Bradford K. Wiley, of Stamford, Conn.

Bishops Differ at Conference On Methodist Union Proposal

By the Associated Press.

Birmingham, Ala., April 28.—The battle over reunion of Northern and Southern Methodist, split in 1844 by slavery, opened today with disagreement among bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, meeting here to consider merger with other groups in the denomination.

The college of bishops also asserted that "the Administration that stabbed the temperance movement of a century is doing nothing to curb the beast that it let loose upon the land."

Legal sale of alcoholic beverages was described in the episcopal address to the quadrennial conference of the church as the "heaviest drag upon American business."

The episcopal address, read at the opening of the twenty-third quadrennial conference of Southern Methodism, was followed by a dissenting statement offered by Bishop Collins Denny, of Richmond, Va., and signed also by Bishop Warren A. Candler, Atlanta.

Bishop James Cannon took issue with statements of the two dissenting bishops.

Both proponents and opponents of unification supported a motion by Dr. T. D. Ellis, floor leader for reunion advocates, to make the "plan of union" a continuing order of business until final disposal.

Both the Methodist Episcopal (Northern) and Methodist Protestant churches have approved the plan of union, which would bring approximately 8,000,000 persons into a single church.

Under the reunion, colored persons would be segregated in a "central jurisdiction," with white members divided into five other jurisdictions on a geographical basis.

the newspapers in any way you please, for any purpose you please, especially political purposes. We found that out in the last election. But you dare not do it on the radio. That is wrong. You should be curbed, says the free press, if that thing should happen in this country."

Senator Edward R. Burke (Democrat), of Nebraska, later told reporters that "the newspapers will be very well able to take care of themselves so far as any move to limit their functions is concerned."

"Whenever I find an individual who berates the press and runs it down," said Burke, "I can put my finger on someone who would prevent the free expression of views by anyone who opposes him." He said he was "convinced that the overwhelming majority of the people feel no sympathy or approval for those attacks on the press."

Burke also had been under Minton's fire. The Indiana Senator said he understood Burke was engaged in mailing out a million letters to business organizations in opposition to the Wagner labor relations act, under his frank.

Minton said "the free press of this country does not want encroachment upon democracy by the radio of this country. If there is going to be any encroachment on democracy, the free press wants to do it itself. It wants a free hand to do all of the encroaching it wants to do."

He contended that "the people largely read the headlines. They do not read the articles which appear below. They read the headlines for the most part."

Then he exhibited the first page of The Washington Post of Wednesday, April 20, 1938, saying he had in his hand "a fine exhibition of propaganda in the newspapers."

Declares Caption Wrong.

"In a three-column-headline," said Minton, "it is stated 'HOLC lawyer is accused of franking a million letters to help a friend.' Anybody who knows Washington and reads that article and finds out that it is a lawyer down in a department, and whose brains are as thick as buttermilk, knows that that fellow could not have franked out a million letters. He could not possibly have done it in the little office he has down there. But it is 'accused' and of course the newspapers then carry the story to the country in the headlines."

[The reference was to a charge made on the floor of the House by Representative Church, Republican, of Illinois, against Horace Russell, counsel for the Home Owners Loan Corporation, as reported in The Post and The Congressional Record. Russell resigned within a few hours after the charge was made, saying only a few hundred letters were franked. Editor's note.]

The Senator said that in the first column of the same edition was a headline: "Priming Foes 'Softened' by PWA Grants, Taber Avers.'"

"Of course Taber avers it," said Minton. "That is all you have to do is to aver it or make the charge, any kind of loose charge against this Administration and it gets a headline and goes to the country as a fact. Yet when you read that headline and when you read the article that follows the headline you find out that all the PWA does is to take stock of the projects that it has on hand that it had approved and has in its pigeonholes before they closed down the operations of the PWA so that if they open up the PWA again they can put these projects out that have already been approved and go to work and put people to work in this country."

[This reference was to a charge by Representative Taber (Republican), of New York, that the PWA was releasing funds on the eve of spending bill action "to influence votes." After making no allotments since August, the PWA announced $3,119,000 in allotments had been released the previous week.—Editor's note.]

Minton referred to another article in the same edition of The Post captioned "McNutt Palace Plan Assailed as an Outrage." He said McNutt's name did not appear in the article under the headline. Senator Minton was the host at the famed reception here February 23 which was regarded as launching the McNutt Presidential boom.

"Everybody knows that the so-called palace in the Philippines was approved and determined to be built by Congress years before McNutt went to the Philippines," said Minton. "Everybody knows that it will not be finished until he is back in the States for years and yet this newspaper says it is the McNutt palace and has been assailed as an outrage."

[The so-called "McNutt palaces" had been discussed in Congress previously in that manner, and plans on file in the Treasury Department for the second structure bear the signed approval of Commissioner McNutt.—Editor's Note.]

Minton said at the head of this column in italicized type appeared: "The Political Scene. Resignation or impeachment of Gov. Earle of Pennsylvania was demanded, etc. . . . See page 5."

[This was an index note to make it easier for the politically minded reader to find another political article.—Editor's Note.]

"That is the kind of propaganda that you get from these newspapers here in Washington every day of the week" said Minton. "That is the kind of propaganda that you get in the big New York newspapers like the Herald Tribune; that is the kind of propaganda that seeps into the northern part of the State of Indiana—not much but some that flows in from that unspeakable Chicago Tribune—the Chicago Tribune that even the newspapers themselves condemn. That is the kind of propaganda that Moe Annenberg, of the Philadelphia Inquirer, spews out to the country; that is the kind of propaganda that you can get into the press of this country, all that you want of it, provided you take a side against this Administration. Yet this great free press of the country wants to curb the radio."

Norris Cites Mead Story.

Senator George W. Norris (Independent), of Nebraska, interrupted Minton at one point to refer to an article carried exclusively in The Post yesterday quoting Representative James M. Mead (Democrat), of New York, as charging that un-American tactics "in the hands of lobbyists with their own selfish interests at heart" defeated the reorganization bill.

"He told his audience a story of what happened with the propaganda that was waged against the reorganization bill," said Norris. "He told them about using the telephone directory in the various towns, getting the names there and sending them in."

Minton, in referring to The Post article on alleged mailing out a million letters by an HOLC official, said he could put Senator Burke on the stand as an "expert" to testify "it is a tremendous job to get out a million letters."

Minton charged Burke "at the present time is engaged in sending out, a million letters I understand to people in this country asking the manufacturers and members of the chambers of commerce to write in and to have their workers and friends to write in to Representatives and Senators protesting against the Wagner labor relations act."

Minton told Senators to "go over to the basement of the Senate Office Building and look at that truckload of letters the Senator has over there, letters written on Senate stationery, which he is going to frank out to a million people in this country. However, before he mails them he is going to frank them out to chambers of commerce and have them address the envelopes on their addressographs, and then he is going to give them his frank so that they may send them back to him, and he can fill the envelopes here and send them out."

Mailed Speech, Burke Says.

Burke later told reporters that between 30,000 and 40,000 copies of a radio speech he made on the Wagner labor relations act have been mailed out. The Nebraskan said he had received numerous requests for two of his radio speeches and he had supplied them when recipients paid the cost of printing in the Government Printing Office. Burke said he inclosed mimeographed letters with the address requesting suggestions by both employers and employes as to how the Wagner act could be improved.

Minton in his attack on the newspapers said the "only way that this Administration has to get to the people is to take it to the radio."

"You cannot get the story into the press" Minton said. "They will not print it. But let anybody make a loose accusation against them (the Administration), and the headlines scream with the story."

He declared the publishers "would deny the President the right to sit down before a microphone in his own home and speak to the people of the country about their Government."

Interupting Minton again, Senator Norris suggested that Congress should consider legislation to prevent newspapers from owning radio stations. By such legislation, Norris said, "we would have two means at least of getting news to the people."

Minton replied that such a bill is now pending in the House "and I think it is probably more justified now that we find that the press is trying to strangle the radio."

Earle Places Ex-U. S. Lawyer In Margiotti Job

Guy K. Bard Launches Investigation of Pennsylvania Frauds.

By the Associated Press.

Harrisburg, Pa., April 28.—A former Federal prosecutor, Guy K. Bard, became Pennsylvania's attorney general tonight and started an immediate investigation of charges of "bought" legislation.

The charges were made in a Democratic primary election campaign speech by Bard's predecessor, Charles J. Margiotti, who was ousted from office by Gov. George H. Earle. Earle said Margiotti refused to discuss openly with him evidence of Margiotti's statements.

Margiotti asserted in a radio speech tonight that Earle had tried to remove him from the cabinet several times in the past three years.

Evidence Told, He Claims.

Margiotti declared he had placed before judges of the Dauphin County (Harrisburg) Court evidence to support his demand for a grand jury investigation of his charges that money passed between "brewing interests" and Democratic leaders for "favorable legislation" in 1935.

Bard, who prosecuted bank cases in Detroit and Los Angeles as a special Assistant United States Attorney General, registered from the Public Utility Commission and took the attorney general's office after it was refused by Herbert F. Goodrich, dean of the University of Pennsylvania law school.

Sarnoff Fears Curb on Radio As Result of 6-Month Licenses

destroys all, and thereby destroys democracy itself.

"A free system of broadcasting can survive only under a democratic form of government, but it is no less true that democratic government itself will survive only if broadcasting is kept free.

"American broadcasting asks no special privileges. It deserves none. It needs none. All it asks is the preservation of the American spirit of freedom."

The radio law of 1934, he said, specifically denies to the Federal Communications Commission the power of censorship.

"While direct censorship over radio programs is thus forbidden by law," he continued, "the terms of the Government licenses leave the door open for an indirect and more insidious—censorship. Any attempt to impose the ordinary 'blue-pencil' censorship is little to be feared, because, being a conspicuous violation of the right of free speech, it would arouse a storm of public protest.

"But what is not conspicuous—and is therefore dangerous—is the affect on the mind of the broadcaster resulting from attitudes that may be taken by the Government toward stations, on matters outside the regulation of facilities."

Wants Longer License.

In a democracy, Sarnoff said, it is the power of public opinion rather than a government tribunal which enforces standards of public expression.

"If freedom means anything," he said, "it means freedom to make mistakes as well as to do the right thing. Broadcasters have made mistakes, plenty of them. That is the way they learned to be broadcasters. I want them left free to make more mistakes. That is the way they will learn to be better broadcasters.

"There should be no censorship by intimidation or economic pressure. The station license should carry a longer term than six months. It should be revocable only for cause, and these causes should be clearly defined in advance."

Sarnoff said it was a "strange assumption" that the less money a broadcasting company makes, the better the public will be served. How, he asked, can the public be given better programs if the broadcaster is deprived of both the incentive and the means to improve his facilities and service?

"Losses mean poorer programs," he said, "and, when private resources fail, Government ownership. If Government regulation of the economics of broadcasting results in a no-profit industry, investors may prefer to exchange their broadcasting equities for Government securities.

"Then we shall have Government ownership and 100 per cent control of broadcasting. Any further discussion of censorship would then be purely academic. We would have broadcasting of the Government, by the Government, and for the Government.

"We have but to look to the autocracies of Europe to see what such governmental control of broadcasting may mean. When the dictator stands before the microphone, the citizens are regimented before the loudspeaker. At the same time, the public may be forbidden, under penalty of imprisonment, to listen to programs presenting any point of view contrary to that of the party in power.

"It is no coincidence that where you find broadcasting enslaved, you also find a slavish press.

"In recent years we have witnessed steady enlargement of the economic power of the Federal Government. That very enlargement has put upon the defenders of democracy the need for greater vigilance. That is where the radio and the press assume a new importance. In the European countries that have been lost to democracy, the dictators who accomplished that revolution did so through their control of radio and the press. Nor were they satisfied with that. Their next step was to use the same governmental power to destroy the freedom of religion and education.

Czechs Reveal Surprise Move To Pacify Nazis

Concessions to Exceed All Expectations, London and Paris Informed.

By the United Press.

Prague, Czechoslovakia, April 28. Premier Milan Hodza has informed the British and French prime ministers, meeting in London, that Czechoslovakia is preparing to offer the Sudeten German minority "concessions far beyond any expectations yet voiced," the foreign office spokesman said tonight.

The memorandums sent to London were said by the spokesman to have outlined in full the government's plan and to have stressed Prague's intention of remaining firm in its alliances with France and Soviet Russia.

Czechoslovakia, he repeated, has no intention of altering her foreign policy despite the demands of the Nazi Sudeten leader, Konrad Henlein, for relaxation of the French and Soviet ties and closer friendship with Germany.

The foreign office spokesman said "maximum concessions" regarding cultural, financial and economic autonomy for the German minority were being drafted, and added, "but we will never offer any concession that would detract from the integrity of the Czechoslovak state."

Discussing Prague's foreign policies, the spokesman said they would "continue to be just the same as before without any change whatever despite the demands of Henlein in his Sunday speech."

The spokesman announced that Premier Hodza intended to call a conference soon of Czech members of Parliament together with the parliamentary members of the Sudeten party to discuss the critical state of affairs. Thus Henlein would be eliminated from the negotiations because he holds no seat in Parliament.

Meetings Curbed.

A leader of the Sudeten party today charged Czechoslovak authorities with "exploiting" the epidemic of hoof and mouth disease among cattle as an excuse to limit the number of German minority mass meetings on Sunday, May day.

A total of 164 meetings of the Sudetens have been scheduled for Sunday which is "the national holida of the German people" celebrated in the German Reich and will coincide with Czechoslovakia's twentieth anniversary of the founding of the republic.

Bennett was not arrested for several months, though his pretty young wife was picked up at her hotel. Pinas was arrested recently ih Florida.

ChineseBandits Slay Salvation Army Worker

Russian Guard Killed With American; Japanese 10 Miles From Railway.

By the Associated Press.

Chinese robbers shot and killed James Dempster, an American of New York City and a major in the Salvation Army, the State Department announced yesterday.

Laurence E. Salisbury, American charge d'affaires at Peiping, notified the department the robbers entered the Salvation Army property at Tinghsien, Hopei, shortly after midnight yesterday morning.

In addition to killing Dempster, they also shot and killed a Russian guard.

Mrs. Dempster was knocked down but was not injured. She and one child arrived safely this evening in Peiping. Two other Dempster children are in Tinghsien.

Japanese Advance.

Shanghai, April 29, (Friday), (AP). —Japanese forces drew tighter their vise of steel on the vital East-West Lunghai Railway but Chinese reported today the invaders' power was spent.

Columns driving south from Shantung Province were within 10 miles of Yunho and Sinanchen, points on the railway 40 and 68 miles respectively east of Suchow, junction point of the Lunghai and the North-South Tientsin-Pukow Railroad.

At the same time, Japanese in Anhwei Province pushing north toward Suchow were reported "within striking distance" of Suhsien, 40 miles from the railway junction.

Chinese Counterattack.

Chinese fought desperately against the invaders driving south toward the Lunghai. The Japanese, though slowed down, advanced three miles in 24 hours. Then, with the fury of the attack spent, the Chinese high command said its forces counterattacked and broke the enemy lines at several points.

The Chinese also were reported to have repulsed three night attacks on Nikow, 10 miles north of Taierchwang.

Loyalists Free U.S. Physician's Wife, Hold Him

Charges Against American Medical Unit Doctor Kept Secret.

By the United Press.

Valencia, Spain, April 28.—Mrs. Albert Byrne of New York, the former Thelma Shorey Erickson of Saugas, Mass., has been released from a Spanish Loyalist prison here after more than a month's detention, it was learned today. Her husband, a physician with the Americah medical unit, remained in jail but the charges against him were not disclosed.

Dr. Byrne and his wife originally were held on charges of attempting to leave Spain illegally. Mrs. Byrne asserted she intended to denounce the leaders of the North American Committee to Aid Spanish Democracy on the grounds they were responsible for the Byrnes' imprisonment.

Bombing in Rain.

Hendaye, France, April 28 (AP).—Insurgent warplanes made "blind bombing" raids on the Spanish government rearguard today despite clouds and heavy rain that halted land operations in Castellon and Teruel provinces.

Bombers flew behind the government lines on the Castellon front and dropped explosives when their infantrymen indicated they were over secondary defenses.

Insurgents said the object was not to destroy positions, but to break the morale of the enemy at a time when rain and bad weather would seem to guarantee freedom from raids.

Both Sides Dig In.

Artillery was silent except for a few batteries which had been trained on particular positions.

The government forces launched several attacks on insurgent positions in the Albocacer sector, 23 miles north of Castellon de la Plana and 47 miles southwest of Tortosa.

Insurgents, however, said no territory changed hands and both sides were busy consolidating their lines and digging trenches in the muddy soil.

Government sources said it would be "at least a week" before the insurgents could resume their offensive. By that time, they predicted, Gen. Jose Miaja's troops would be installed in solid defenses.

man minority has increased its clamor.

Agreement on these points emerged from the meeting headed by Daladier and Chamberlain:

The British-Italian friendship pact—despite French fears of Italian and German domination in Spain through the support the Fascist countries have given Spanish insurgents.

Continuance of the "hands off Spain" policy as the best insurance against embroiling the rest of Europe in war.

Mutual defense preparations—both military and economic—with technical staff talks probably soon.

The procedure to take at Geneva to gain recognition of Italy's conquest of Ethiopia—which Italy has demanded as a price of renewed friendship with the two countries.

Daladier told Chamberlain that France hoped to appoint an ambassador to Italy by May 15, restoring good relations strained by the Ethiopian war and aggravated b the Spanish civil conflict.

District Opens Campaign for Child Health

Goal Is to 'Eliminate Conditions Conducive to Disease' in Capital.

With the slogan "speed children on the road to health," District Health Department officials yesterday began a vigorous campaign leading to Child Health Day May 1, determined to "eliminate conditions which are conducive to disease, and to promote a high quality of child health in the District."

Health officials pointed out that the program would not cease after observance of the National Child Health Day, but would be continued until the health objectives were firmly established.

At the same time the District Commissioners issued a proclamation urging the co-operation of all agencies, both public and private, to promote the health and welfare of the children in the District.

The proclamation follows:

Whereas, the President of the United States has proclaimed May 1 as Child Health Day, and

Whereas, the health and security of the children of the District of Columbia is of paramount importance, and

Whereas, the program to promote maternal and child health and to extend child welfare services in the District of Columbia is about to be launched.

Now, therefore, we, the Commissioners of the District of Columbia do hereby proclaim and designate the first day of May of this year as Child Health Day, and do urge all agencies, public and private, concerned with the health and welfare of children in the District of Columbia, on this day to study plans for Federal and local co-operation in promoting the health and security of children, to note the extent to which those plans have been put into effect, and to make arrangements for carrying their benefits to the children of the District.

Mrs. Roosevelt and Miss Katherine Lenroot, chief of the Children's Bureau, Department of Labor, will be the principal speakers May 2 at a luncheon in connection with the health program. The luncheon will be held at the Willard Hotel at 12:30 p. m.

Rose Bampton Has D.C. Debut In Verdi Opera

New York Grand Opera Company presents Verdi's "Il Trovatore" at Constitution Hall Thursday evening. The cast:

LEONORA	Rose Bampton
MANRICO	S. De Gaviria
COUNT di LUNA	Carlo Morelli
AZUCENA	Grace Angelau
FERNANDO	Nino Ruisi
INES	Maria Santacara
RUIZ	Carlo Lodovici

"Il Trovatore" was performed in a fashion befitting its violent character at Constitution Hall last night.

The debut of Miss Rose Bampton in Di tale amor was the signal for a genuine applause. The soprano, so recently one of our leading contraltos, was in limpid voice and her wide range was called into full play. Azucena was well sung by Grace Angelau. While some of Miss Angelau's lower tones were muffled, possibly owing to a potent orchestra, her phrasing was keen and knowing and she played the part with all the skill which Verdi demanded. For those who have not heard him, Carlo Morelli was the surprise of the evening. His is a full, rich barytone.

Mr. De Gaviria who substituted for Sidney Rayner was rumored to be from both the Hippodrome Co. in New York and from Milan's La Scala. He acted with the accomplished finesse of the latter and sang with the occasional breathiness of the former.

Some consider this work, which gave us the popular Anvil Chorus and the famous Ai nostri monti to be a cheap second rate opera, but as it was sung last evening, it was a vigorous colorful music drama.

Maritime Measure Passed by House

By the Associated Press.

Legislation designed to rehabilitate the American merchant marine won overwhelming House approval yesterday.

The measure, which now goes to the Senate, was passed without a record vote after mid-Western members led a successful revolt against one section which would have permitted payment of Federal subsidies to intercoastal shipping. This provision was eliminated by a standing vote of 132 to 27.

As finally approved, the bill would reduce the down payment required on new ships financed by the Maritime Commission from 25 per cent of the domestic cost to 25 per cent of the foreign cost.

Woman Burns to Death As Candle Ignites Hair

Baltimore, April 28 (AP).—A woman whose body burst into flames was burned to death last night when the heat of the fire drove back would-be rescuers.

Mrs. Rosa Mayr, 60, walked out of the side entrance of her home, apparently carrying a candle. The fire ignited her hair, and flames at once enveloped her body. Louis G. Klein and Joseph Loeffler, standing nearby, said they could not approach the woman because of the intense heat.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge Foundation in the Library of Congress presents the Coolidge Quartet, Frank Bridge, pianist, and Rocco Contini, tenor, in the Coolidge Auditorium. Program: Quartet in E minor (Edward Elgar), Sonata for violin and piano (Frank Bridge), "On Wenlock Edge" (Ralph Vaughan Wililams).

In the penultimate program of their spring series, the Coolidge Quartet players turned their attention last night to three English composers of our own day: the late Sir Edward Elgar, Frank Bridge and Ralph Vaughan Williams. This choice afforded an interested audience the observation of a conservative capable of adapting his style to an epoch of change, a belated romanticist determined to be modern, and a confirmed nationalist.

Apart from an early string quartet which remains in manuscript, Sir Edward wrote no chamber music until the end of the war, when he produced in rapid succession the quartet in E minor, a piano quintet and a violincello concerto, all of the finest quality and workmanship. The quartet is a very personal work, and its three movements are thoroughly subjective in content. The opening allegro reflects a disturbed and restless mind, seeking a solution for a gnawing doubt and finding none.

In the second movement one feels a retrospective mood, a nostalgic return to a past which can never be recaptured, for the music is suffused with English feeling, and an eloquent lyricism speaks in the melodic lines. The finale returns with more confidence to the questioning of destiny and faces the unknown future courageously. In the harmonic idiom one sees the composer's steps toward liberalism, for there are definite traces of Richard Strauss, traces which do not indicate imitation, for Sir Edward was too great a musician to lean upon others, but a broad tolerance.

Frank Bridge at heart is a romanticist who has rather reluctantly recognized the inevitability of a materialistic phase, and he has followed the evolution with a lagging pace. For that reason his sonata of 1930 is essentially at about the same stage as Leo Ornstein's "Poems of 1919." Animated by a sincere poesy, the music is a little bleak, as though it shivered in the cold of atonality. This sonata does not yields its meaning easily, and even the fine reading by Lillian Kroll and Frank Sheridan left one uncertain as to its message.

Faced with the dilemma of internationalism versus nationalism, Ralph Vaughan Williams has elected to be a representative of his native land. His is modern folk music, British in the form of the tunes and in the flower of the harmonies. It was but natural that he should turn to that very English poet, A. E. Housman, and set six of the lyrics from "A Shropshire Lad" in a cycle titled after the poem, "On Wenlock Edge." Seldom has the combination of solo voice, pianoforte and string quartet been so beautifully used as in these splendid songs.

The atmospheric blending of the timbres is exquisite in delicacy and the spirit of place has been evoked with a magic touch. Only in England could this inspiration have flowered. Rocco Contini was the admirable vocalist who visualized the poignancy and loveliness of the melodized texts, voicing them with clear diction and emotional urgency.

New D. A. R. Head Feted at Annapolis

Annapolis, April 28 (AP).—Mrs. Henry M. Robert, jr., newly elected president general of the Daughters of the American Revolution, today was greeted by a home town group of about 1,000 school children when she made her first official appearance here since her election.

The occasion was the celebration of the 150th anniversary of the ratification of the Federal Constitution by Maryland. The exercises were held in the Annapolis High School auditorium. Brig. Gen. Amos W. W. Woodcock, former president of St. John's College, shared speaking honors with Mrs. Robert.

Woman Saved Seconds Before Gas Tank Blast

Baltimore, April 28 (AP).—Two passersby dragged Mrs. Fannie L. Sussman, 30, from the tangled wreckage of her burning automobile today just seconds before the gasoline tank exploded.

Mrs. Sussman suffered only minor burns on her legs. Her rescuers, Michael Perreaa and Frank Pelmer, escaped uninjured. Her automobile had overturned following a collision.

Anti-Monopoly Message Draft Is Due Today

only limited action by Congress to provide for a study of the problem.

But it was conceded yesterday that special phases of the problem might be dealt with before Congress adjourns and the President may ask this. In one quarter it was said that bank holding company legislation now pending in House and Senate Banking Committees may be moved forward.

While Arnold made clear in his New York address that he was discussing anti-trust laws as they now are and not as they should be, he said an analysis of what can be done under present procedure "throws incidental light upon the type of amendment which is most desirable."

Better Method Seen.

"There are unquestionably better ways of investigation than by a grand jury," he told the New York trade group. "There are also means of implementing the civil process so that the criminal procedure will not be the only effective deterrent. An analysis of present procedure also indicates that the power of public investigation on the part of the department might clarify the task of making its policy public and intelligible."

Arnold proposed in the future to make public the decisions and attitudes of the Justice Department in the selection and prosecution of anti-trust cases. As all complaints cannot be investigated and as some departmental discretion must be exercised in the selection made, he said "the grounds underlying that selection should be publicly stated in each case to the end that a consistent and open policy of prosecution may gradually be derived from statements in connection with individual cases."

Would Serve as Warning.

The Assistant Attorney General said this would localize the department's interpretation of the law to a particular industry, and serve as "both a warning and a guide" to business.

He told his New York audience that such public statements by the department in individual prosecutions would serve as an "intelligent aid" to legislative amendment of the anti-trust laws.

"They can serve," he said, "to call the attention of Congress to particular uses of legal privileges such as patents, copyrights, credit, corporate forms of organization, etc., which are being used in particular industries.

"Remedial legislation arrived at in that way would be definitely directed at particular problems. Such legislation is apt to be more concrete and more adapted to its ends than legislation which relies on general formulae."

Pledging "vigorous and fair" enforcement of the anti-trust laws, with no let-up during the present economic recession, Arnold emphasized throughout his address this proposal to publicize information on particular anti-trust cases.

Consults President.

"By a continuing policy of public statement when individual cases are commenced, I hope to make them even more concrete by giving them a particular application to the various dissimilar situations to which we must apply the general policies of the anti-trust laws," he concluded.

The former Yale University law professor has been in frequent consultation with the President, and his speech last night was believed to give some cue to the tenor of Mr. Roosevelt's long-awaited monopoly message.

Presence also at the White House yesterday of Cohen, advisor on bill drafting, who has supplied many of the major links in New Deal legislation, led to reports that a bill has been drafted to carry out Mr. Roosevelt's recommendations.

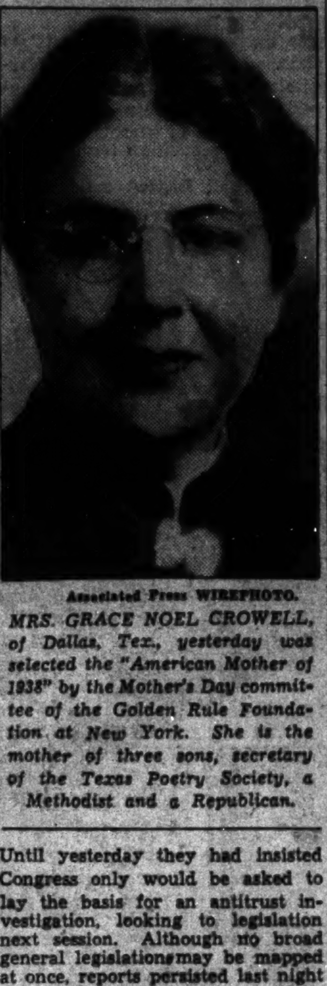
1938's American Mother



Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

MRS. GRACE NOEL CROWELL, of Dallas, Tex., yesterday was selected the "American Mother of 1938" by the Mother's Day committee of the Golden Rule Foundation at New York. She is the mother of three sons, secretary of the Texas Poetry Society, a Methodist and a Republican.

Until yesterday they had insisted Congress only would be asked to lay the basis for an antitrust investigation, looking to legislation next session. Although no broad general legislation may be mapped at once, reports persisted last night that action on some points will be sought this session.

Bank Holding Proposals.

Recommendations on bank holding company legislation by an interdepartmental committee have been before the President for some time. A bill to restrict bank holding company growth already has been introduced by Senator Carter Glass (Democrat), of Virginia, but it has remained motionless in committee.

Speculation on possible inclusion in the message of the President's attitude on Federal licensing of corporations followed a recent trip to the White House by Senator William E. Borah (Republican), of Idaho, arch-foe of monopolies. Borah has joined with Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming, in a bill to bring corporations under close-knit Federal monopoly regulation through license requirements. Both Borah and O'Mahoney have been hopeful of a monopoly study that would embrace their plan.

Arnold made the following points on departmental "policy:"

That the Government should consider first "the actual results and the use of legal privileges by groups achieving domination of the market rather than their motive."

That in a choice between civil and criminal actions, the most effective deterrent to illegal practices "lies on the criminal side of the court."

That Congress did not forbid criminal prosecutions while negotiations for a consent decree are pending.

"I conceive it the duty of the Department of Justice both to the courts and to Congress," he said. "To the courts they owe the duty of fair and able presentation of the particular cases which they prosecute. To Congress they owe the duty of marking out an intelligible line of policy of law enforcement. No other department can possibly outline that duty for them in a field where rules of thumb are not possible."

out consultation with the Congress or people.

Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, charged that the United States has no basis other than an unconfirmed article in an Italian newspaper for asking authority to build 45,000-ton superdreadnaughts. The article said Japan reportedly is building battleships in excess of the 35,000-ton treaty limits.

He then quoted a Japanese admiral as saying that the United States and British naval building plans for larger battleships must be interpreted as unfriendly to Japan.

"See how it works?" he asked. "It's a stern chase from start to finish and nobody ever catches anybody else until somebody goes bankrupt."

Copeland Defends Bill.

Senator Royal S. Copeland (Democrat), of New York, spoke in favor of the big navy program, stating that there are no grounds for fears that President Roosevelt might use the ships in power diplomacy since they will not be constructed for seven or eight years.

Senator William J. Bulow (Democrat), of South Dakota, in one of his rare floor speeches warned that the United States "is in far greater danger of going to pieces internally than we are from attack from the outside." He added that Congress should act to eliminate sit-down strikes instead of authorizing huge navies.

He pointed to Germany after the World War as an example of what happens to "prepared nations."

Senator Capper (Republican), of Kansas, told the Senate he opposed the program because he felt a real apprehension that "it means we are preparing to enter the game of world politics in a big way."

"Temptation" to President.

"This Congress very wisely refused to give the Chief Executive power to pack the Supreme Court. This Congress very wisely refused to give the Chief Executive power to reorganize the Government.

"Now it is proposed to give to the Chief Executive not only the power, but the very great temptation, to intervene in foreign affairs for the high and noble purpose of making Europe and Asia be good."

The House Military Affairs Committee yesterday favorably reported a bill to add 3,000 enlisted men to the Army Air Corps.

The measure authorizes the transfer of the additional personnel from other branches of the Army, but does not increase the size of the military forces. The proposal has been approved by the War Department and the Bureau of the Budget.

'Gift of God' Baby Case Ruled Fraud

St. Paul, April 28 (AP).—The U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals held today the chief object of the famous St. Louis "gift of God" baby case scheme was "fraudulently to convince Dr. Marsh Pitzman that he was the father of a child born to Mrs. Nellie Tipton Muench." The court affirmed conviction of Mrs. Muench and two co-defendants, her husband, Dr. Ludwig O. Muench, and Wilfred Jones.

To Attend F. B. I. School.

Hagerstown, April 27.—Sergt. John S. Divine, of the Hagerstown Police Department, will leave Sunday for Washington to enroll in the summer session of the Federal Bureau of Investigation School. He will be placed in charge of traffic safety here upon completion of the course.

200 D. C. Drivers Win Safety Awards

Awards for safe driving practices are to be presented to more than 200 drivers for the District Government, it was announced yesterday by Edward J. Bunker, District safety inspector.

City employes who have driven a year without a single accident will be given pay increases, Bunker said. Other drivers with only minor mishaps against their records will receive safe driving awards of the National Safety Council.

Ten of the most efficient drivers in each District department will be selected for pay raises. They will be given an additional $60 a year. Through this method the commissioners hope to increase efficiency and save money, Bunker declared.

Arlington Infant Christened in Air Mile Above D. C.

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dick Bassett, 321 North Oakland street, Arlington, Va., Mary Elizabeth was christened by the Rev. Albert H. Gilbert.

During the ceremony transatlantic pilot Clarence D. Chamberlin circled the plane, carrying 26 passengers, over the Washington Monument.

Among the witnesses were Mary Elizabeth's parents and her two older brothers, Tommy, 12, and Johnny, 7.

Museum for Army Sought in Congress

Identical bills were introduced in the Senate and House yesterday to authorize the Secretary of War to construct a new Army Medical Library and Museum, the cost to be limited to $3,700,000.

Broadcast Jails Capital Hauler in Bad Brake Case

William Cohen, 21, operator of the Capital Hauling Co., was ordered to spend 48 hours in jail and pay a $100 fine yesterday through information supplied to Judge Walter J. Casey as the result of a radio broadcast from Traffic Court a week ago.

Cohen was brought to court originally after two of his drivers had been convicted of operating a truck with defective handbrakes, to answer charges of permitting use of a truck with bad brakes. As evidence for the defense, Cohen produced a repair bill showing the handbrakes had been fixed recently by C. F. Lapp, 903 N street northwest.

Lapp heard the broadcast and telephoned the court to say he had repaired the footbrakes, not the handbrakes. Evidence was produced yesterday to show that the word footbrake had been changed to handbrake on the receipt.

Winchester, Va., April 28.—The Winchester Lions Club has for the third consecutive year won the Virginia attendance trophy, thereby gaining permanent possession of the cup, it was learned today.

Savants Trace Heart Distress To Sensitivity

Skin Five Times More Receptive to Heat Than to Cold, Meeting Told.

Scientists, continuing a week of intensive meetings in Washington yesterday, heard:

That electric eels discharge their electricity at the amazing speed of six-tenths of a mile a second.

That what has long been suspected here in July and August is true—the skin is five times more sensitive to heat than to cold.

That water can be cooled artificially below the ordinary freezing point without turning to ice.

That a streamlined golf club will add 15 yards to the drive of a professional and cut the slice of a dub.

That Amelia Earhart might have been saved by a new navigation instrument.

The most striking phenomenon in life is the generation of electricity by certain fish that can discharge it at will, C. W. Coates, of the New York Aquarium, and T. R. Cox, of New York University, told the American Physical Society, American section of the International Scientific Radio Union, and Institute of Radio Engineers last night at the Commerce Department auditorium.

"There is reason to believe," they said in their lecture demonstration, "that this ability is merely a further development—or enlargement of the generation of electricity of nerves in all living creatures in minute quantities."

Before measurement of the discharges of the electric eel through the body, the highest speeds of nerve discharges in physiological laboratories previously noted have been 110 yards a second.

The sluggish eel lives in quiet, shallow waters of streams in South America. It can reach a length of 8 feet and a weight of 50 pounds. Half the weight is accounted for by the tissues which generate the electricity. Fairly well authenticated records show that horses have been killed by repeated shocks from the fish.

Trying to account for the electric discharges, which have puzzled scientists for a century, the lecturers reported that "we believe that the electromotive force is generated in each cell, the same as in nerves or concentration cells in the laboratory, and the discharges produced by sudden drop in resistance of nerve sheaths between the cells, joining cells transiently in series." Why the fish are electric is still a mystery, they concluded.

The fact that the skin is more sensitive to heat than cold was reported to the American Physical Society at the Bureau of Standards by Charles E. Buchwald and Caryl P. Haskins, of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and the Haskins Laboratory.

It requires a fall of four thousandths of a degree per second to stimulate the cold sensation, while it requires a rise of only eight ten-thousandths of a degree per second to stimulate heat sensation, they reported.

Persons can be made to shiver, even if the body is warm, by cold stimulation to the body. On the other hand, if the body is cold enough to shiver, a warm stimulation will prevent shivering.

They applied cold metal to the foreheads of subjects and found, however, that calorie for calorie, cold radiation produced twice the temperature change in the skin as did heat radiation.

The phenomenon of water cooled artificially far below the normal freezing point without turning to ice was reported by Dr. N. Ernest Dorsey, of the Bureau of Standards.

Outdoor water seldom falls below 32 degrees without freezing, but in the laboratory Dr. Dorsey reduced water to as low as four degrees below zero, 36 degrees below the freezing point, before it turned to ice.

Dr. Dorsey carried on his experiments with water sealed in half-filled glass cylinders. He found that various types of water taken from wells, rivers, lakes, faucets and other sources had different temperatures at which they froze when kept motionless in the laboratory.

The best explanation, he said, is that the freezing point depends upon the size of small bits of matter in the motionless water. The smaller the bits, the lower the temperature at which the water will freeze.

The physicists heard Dr. S. J. Crooker, of Purcellville, Va., formerly of the Bureau of Standards, describe the streamlined golf club.

Measurement of golf club head speeds with photoelectric cells and high speed cameras show that the best players may swing as fast as 125 miles an hour. At this speed air resistance of drivers is of importance.

Application of wind tunnel research data led Dr. Crooker to design a streamlined driver head which had 15 times less wind resistance than the traditional club head. With it Jimmy Thompson's drives could carry 275 yards.

The clubhead, of tough persimmon wood, is 4½ inches long by 2⅛ inches wide at the head. From the flat circular driving surface it bulges slightly and then tapers to a point at the rear.

A new instrument for navigation of an airplane at night was described by Dr. T. A. Jaggar, volcano expert of the National Park Service, before the American Geophysical Union at the National Academy of Science building.

Jaggar said he had warned Miss Earhart of the danger of flying the stretch of the South Pacific in which she was lost without reliable instruments for celestial navigation.

The instrument he has developed consists of three telescopes focused on any three stars as shown on a chart of the heavens. Distances between the observed stars and the angle at which they are seen gives a quick determination to within a few miles of the point from which the observer is looking.

who wish to become affiliated with this new organization to do so," said William Green, A. F. L. president, in announcing the council's decision.

Once Denounced Group.

"The American Federation of Labor will give this new union its fullest support."

Green showed reporters at a press conference a sheaf of letters which he said contained requests from miners now in the U. M. W. for an A. F. L. union.

Some of the letters, he said, came from Pennsylvania anthracite miners. The Progressives would invade that field soon, headded.

Green once loudly denounced the union which is now part of the A. F. L. family.

Green and his father, Hugh, were charter members of the United Mine workers. He rose from pit committee chairman to international secretary-treasurer of the union, and resigned his membership just two months ago when the A. F. L. expelled the U. M. W.

Campaign Planned

Green's formal announcement said in part:

"The new international union will * * * undertake immediately an educational campaign to acquaint the mine workers of America wherein their interests have been disregarded by the United Mine Workers of America and how they will benefit by affiliation with the new International Union.

Some persons close to the A. F. L. council said its members felt the new union might keep Lewis so busy that he could devote little attention to promoting the C. I. O. cause in other industries.

ranks at John Marshall place and C street northwest at 8:15 o'clock tonight and march, with flares and placards, to Fourteenth street and Pennsylvania avenue.

There the marchers are expected to form the nucleus for a mass meeting which will hear pleas for a heavy vote from John I. Dugan, representing Federal employes; Malcolm McConihe, Democratic national committeeman, and Lyle F. O'Rourke, president of the Junior Board.

The open-air rally on the square between the commerce building and the Willard Hotel, scheduled to begin at 9 p. m., will be moved to the Labor Department auditorium in case of bad weather, it was announced.

"Whole-hearted support" for the suffrage referendum tomorrow was pledged by Senator Capper as he secured unanimous consent for insertion of the civic leaders' petition in the appendix of the Congressional Record.

Signed by representatives of civic, business, labor and political groups, the statement approves both the Capper-Norton and Lewis-Randolph resolutions, now pending in Congress. Both resolutions would set in motion the machinery of constitutional amendment to empower Congress to grant the District national representation and a voice in its local government.

In a radio speech delivered yesterday afternoon shortly after she had sponsored the suffrage petition on the House floor, Representative Norton said she had found that the District system of government "simply did not make sense."

The former chairman of the House District Committee said she would support no legislation for District suffrage unless "local self-government is guaranteed.

"I insist on this guarantee because I know the realities of conditions in the administration of this city. I know that existing abuses, political preferment for strangers to your welfare, and an all too general disposition of those in authority over you to subject your interests to outside influence can be put to rights only through the agency of a popular city government, popularly elected."

The League of Women Voters' convention authorized telegrams to chairmen of the House and Senate judiciary committee after Mrs. Charles H. Weston had explained that the first hearings in ten years on the subject of District suffrage would be held early in May.

The House Judiciary Committee hearing has been postponed from May 4 to May 11, it was announced yesterday by the clerk of the committee.

William H. Mondell, chairman of the election committee of the suffrage conference, pointed out that the ballot, asks, "Are you now a resident of Washington?" The wording, he stated, furnishes no basis for the West Virginia attorney's dictum that a vote tomorrow "would strongly indicate a change of intention with respect to his (the individual's desire to vote in West Virginia, and might result in election officials in West Virginia challening his right to vote in this State if same were brought to their attention."

T. J. Mangan, jr., president of the Pennsylvania Democratic Club of Washington, and Peter Connolly, president of the New York State organization here, both said last night that their groups had not been advised against taking part in the balloting, although they believed most of the members would prefer to vote "back home," rather than in the District.

In a speech before the Junior Board of Commerce luncheon meeting at the Annapolis Hotel, Representative Randolph declared that the extension of American democratic privileges to the District in this period of crisis would serve as an effective rebuttal to foreign and domestic critics of democracy.

The opening of balloting places in 63 precints at 9 a. m. tomorrow was likened to a "clarion call" to citizens of the Capital by Mrs. Margaret Hopkins Worrell, as she appealed by radio for an effective demonstration of Washington's desire "for a republican form of government."

Urging all District residents to move for "the most basic of all political rights, the right to vote," the Washington local of the Socialist Party last night urged a large vote in the plebiscite.

Dramatizing the fight against "taxation without representation," half a dozen Junior Board of Commerce members yesterday borrowed hatchets from Boy Scout friends, bedecked themselves in lipstick and war bonnets and staged a second Boston Tea Party.

Souder Given 4 Years in 'Pen' In Relief Fraud

Judge Asserts Sentence Is Warning to All Who Handle Public Funds.

P. Ray Souder, former supervisor of aid for Montgomery County, yesterday was sentenced to four years in the penitentiary by Judges Charles W. Woodward and Arthur Willard in the Circuit Court at Rockville.

On Wednesday night a jury found Souder guilty of forging and uttering a $25 relief check.

Before he announced the decision, Judge Woodward told the defendant the pnishment was not for him alone, "but a warning to everyone who handles public money that he must handle it with scrupulous honesty."

"This court wants it understood that every man in this county who mishandles public funds and is convicted must serve time," the judge asserted.

The court considered the penalty "light" in view of the fact that, under the maximum penalty, Souder could have been sentenced to 10 years on each count, or 20 years in all, Judge Woodward added.

In an appeal for leniency, just before sentence was passed, Kenneth Lyddane and John Oxley, defense attorneys, told the court they believed Souder's alleged acts were not "those of a normal person."

Brunette Is Held As a Writer of False Love Letters

An attractive 37-year-old brunette, described by officers at the United States Marshal's office as the operator of an extensive love letter racket, was arrested yesterday at her home in the 400 block of D street northeast, and held for postal authorities.

The woman, Mrs. Elfie Molde Margold, was arrested on a bench warrant issued in Madison, Wis., where she is under indictment for fraudulent use of the mails. She was turned over to the United States marshal and held in $5,000 bond at the District Jail for a removal hearing at 10 a. m. today before United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage.

According to complaint in the United States marshal's office, the woman advertised from her home in Richmond, Wis., for lonely persons to start a correspondence. She would propose marriage to one of her letter writers and ask for money for traveling expenses. After the money came through she allegedly would break off the correspondence and fail to keep the date for marriage.

Good Police Work.

"Good work!" is the word for the Police Department. To lay and successfully spring a trap frustrating a $5,000 holdup not only demonstrates courage and perseverance but also gives assurance that the city's detectives keep well posted on underworld affairs. As this information spreads, criminal elements generally should give Washington a wider berth.

The "men" resting behind bars as a result of this incident range in age from 20 to 27. All three have run afoul of the law before. More to the point, all three spent time as comparative youngsters either in the National Training School or Lorton Reformatory. Eschewing all sentimentality, the moral is obvious: The institutions failed to rehabilitate the boys. Nor was their latest crime needed to indicate this, for each is reported to have been embroiled in a series of relatively petty crimes since release from his first incarceration.

Society has just begun to grapple with problems of this kind. The efficiency of the police in bringing young criminals before the bar of justice serves to emphasize the inadequacy of the treatment they receive in most public institutions. Even when gangs are broken up and gunmen are imprisoned the crime problem is far from being solved. In too many cases the punishment thus meted out provides the background for more serious crime.

Experience long since indicated that no easy solution will be found. But a number of well-defined steps can be taken toward more successful handling of delinquent youths and adults who have committed only minor offenses. Modernization of the juvenile court is one objective in which the District has placed considerable hope. Another hope lies in the Parole Board. The need here is more funds. As it is today, each parole officer has the supervision of between 150 and 200 cases. The careful check needed to hold both young and old prisoners to the straight and narrow path is virtually impossible.

Regardless of how baffling the problem may be in its larger aspects, there can be no excuse for failure to make these simple but fundamental improvements.

Mr. Ford's Recovery Views.

Details of the conference between President Roosevelt and Henry Ford are apparently not to be revealed, but the industrialist makes no secret of his own views on recovery. As he sees it, the country's chief economic problem is Governmental interference with business.

Mr. Ford's theory of prosperity was well known to the American public long before the collapse of 1929. He is an advocate of high wages and low prices to make possible a wide distribution of industrial products. Like President Roosevelt, he believes that high purchasing power is necessary to keep the wheels of industry turning. But he properly insists that such purchasing power ought to come from the operations of private industry and not from the Federal Treasury.

Mr. Ford's statement of that realistic view is impressive. It is the manufacture of goods at prices within the means of large numbers of people that has made mass production possible. Undoubtedly that formula has been an important factor in the remarkable economic progress of the current century. In seeking a solution for the current depression, however, that thesis seems to be only a foundation on which to build.

The criticism of this industrialist was not confined to the Administration. He also complained that private enterprise is neglecting its duty by letting wages go down while prices go up. Apparently he believes that many employers are not living up to the prosperity formula which he and many other industrialists so heartily indorse.

It is rather difficult to reconcile that view with some of Mr. Ford's own statements and policies. Despite the fact that some industries are not living up to their social responsibilities, he wants no interference from Government. Presumably the problem of wages and wide distribution of goods ought to be handled by those whose interests are immediately at stake. But Mr. Ford is also an implacable foe of organized labor and collective bargaining. That would seem to leave the adjustments which he believes to be desirable entirely in the hands of a small group of industrialists.

The paternalistic interest of some employers in keeping wages high and the prices of their products low is good so far as it goes. Few will regard it, however, as an adequate formula for prosperity. If employes are to bargain effectively for a fair share of the income produced by industry they must be efficiently organized free from domination by company managements. Intelligent collective bargaining would seem to be an essential step in carrying out Mr. Ford's thesis of high purchasing power from industrial sources.

Demands for the release of industry from Governmental restraints would be greatly strengthened, therefore, if some of the industrialists who are sponsoring this plea were willing to negotiate terms of employment with their own workers. No suggestion that decisions of such vital importance to the country be left to the discretion of employers alone is likely to carry any weight in the solution of our current problems.

Thurman Arnold's Formula.

In his initial public address as Assistant Attorney General, delivered in New York last night, Mr. Thurman Arnold outlined the procedure which he proposes to follow in the prosecution of suits brought by the Government under the Antitrust Laws. In spite of the aridity of the subject, it was as interesting a speech as one would expect from the author of "The Folklore of Capitalism." But, more to the point, the presentation gives promise of bringing logic, reason and good will into the Administration's handling of a very tangled subject.

The Antitrust Laws as they should be, Mr. Arnold explains, is a problem for Congress. His concern is with this legislation as it is, though he suggests that intelligent enforcement of the present statutes can scarcely fail to throw "incidental light upon the type of amendment which is most desirable." This is so probable as to give additional importance to the remarks of the new Assistant Attorney General.

The basis of Mr. Arnold's thought is that rigid price maintenance through the exercise of monopoly power inevitably forces Governmental interference. In a depression period, he points out, monopolistic practices tend to gain ground because at this time weaker competitors are most susceptible to destruction. Therefore, legalistic considerations aside, it would be undesirable to slow up antitrust prosecutions now "in order to give business the confidence to expand." From a long-range viewpoint vigorous prosecutions mean less, not more, Governmental interference in business.

At the same time Mr. Arnold recognizes that any catastrophic price decline is economically as injurious as rigid price maintenance. "Orderly markets are necessary to maintain the solvency of competitors." And fully realizing the delicacy of the problem, as well as the inevitability of selection in prosecutions, Mr. Arnold reaches the conclusion that at the initiation of each case there should be a comprehensive public explanation of why this particular prosecution is undertaken. "The aim of such a policy is to give businessmen both guides and warnings in a field which is as admittedly uncertain in definition as the conception of reckless driving on the highway."

It will necessarily take time for the practical application of this idea to be effective. But its usefulness in clarifying the attitude of the Department of Justice is obvious. As the procedure is followed out, with public explanation both of the purpose and the result desired made in advance of each prosecution, understanding should gradually replace the present hopeless confusion over interpretation of the antitrust laws.

With the Government's cards thus placed on the table, recalcitrance on the part of business should in most cases disappear automatically. When it does not a defiant attitude will be the more difficult to maintain without good reason. And if the law needs amendment, to eliminate fundamental inconsistencies, this technique should make the desirable reforms more clear.

Mr. Arnold's policy, as announced last night, is not the less appealing because essentially simple in conception. At a time when the importance of closer co-operation between Government and business is obvious to all he has developed a formula which promises to clear up one important field of misunderstandings and uncertainties.

End Of The "El."

It looks as though they're going to tear down the old Sixth Avenue "El" in New York. Visitors will scarcely miss the landmark. But to New Yorkers this operation will be important.

The "El" today is just about as useful as an appendix and, taken in all its meanderings, almost as vermiform. Time was, back in the grass-eating age of the metropolis, when it was really needed for transportation. Indeed, it was one of the sights of the city to see people riding calmly along overhead at a speed of 20 miles an hour. Those were the days of steam, of course, and housewives along the tracks regularly shied bricks at the passing engines whose soot made washday a double misery. Those were the days, too, when an engineer named Hylan little thought he would one day exchange his denim overalls for the cutaway of Mayor of New York.

F. P. A. once said that the overhead tracks of the regular railroads leading northwards out of New York gave one half of the world an idea of how the other half lived. If this was so, the Sixth Avenue "El" gave the whole world an idea of how the whole world lived. For its views were by no means limited to tenement life. From starting-point at the Battery (South Ferry in "El" parlance) to re-connection with the Ninth avenue line at mid-town, it offered the venturesome passenger a kaleidoscope picture of the modern metropolis—from somber jute warehouses to the Hippodrome's marquee, from Greenwich Village to the doleful dumps where consumptive men make fur coats for hypochondriac women.

But there were not enough sociologically-minded people to make the enterprise pay. A few years ago, about the time vitamins were sweeping the land, a gallant attempt was made to sell the "El" on its relative healthfulness. Cars were painted a gaudy yellow and the system was advertised loudly as the "Open Air Line." But to no avail. Soon the rickety trains and ginger-bread stations lapsed back to their wonted dull brindle. Turnstiles to replace the chilblained ticket-choppers had even less effect. Like old horses, the filigreed wooden cars with their jangling gates just tired out on the job.

Now they're to be quietly put away. Along Sixth avenue, where conversation has been broken into natural paragraphs by each passing train, they'll soon be shrieking constantly above the automobiles' beeps, just like all the rest of New York.

Lure Of The Pork Barrel.

In his recent pump-priming message the President asked only $25,000,000 more for Federal buildings. Even this limited sum seems excessive in view of the recommendations in his January budget message. He then explained that more than 1,100 new Federal buildings had been constructed during the past five years—almost doubling the number of such structures in the country.

He also pointed out that in many cases the upkeep of these new buildings was actually costing the Government more than it formerly paid for leased quarters. Apart, therefore, from making adequate provision for Government agencies in the District, the President said: "I am strongly of the opinion that the public-building program should be restricted to the comparatively small number of projects where the capital investment will be returned through savings in annual operating costs."

In that same message, the President recommended curtailment of expenditures for all sorts of capital improvements, such as new highways, rivers and harbors, public buildings and other public works. Two reasons were cited: First, Government income was expected to decline. Secondly, "it has been amply demonstrated" that such projects "do not provide as much work as do other methods of taking care of the unemployed."

In face of these sound arguments against expansion of the Federal building program, the Administration is reported to have capitulated to the pressure of a so-called House building bloc. The result is an agreement to "step up" the outlay for Federal buildings by $60,000,000, spreading expenditures over a three-year period. Such a sum, combined with existing authorizations, would, it is said, provide virtually every Congressional district with two new postoffices.

This kind of pork-barrel spending has an almost irresistible lure for legislators. And the President's re-conversion to spending as a cure for depression has naturally whetted their appetites and made it much more difficult for the Administration to resist their appeals. One of the most serious consequences of a policy of deliberate spending to stimulate business activity is that it destroys the incentive to economize. Indeed, it makes retrenchment of any kind seem futile, if not positively inimical to Administration policy.

The average Congressman no doubt thinks it inconsistent to pour out PWA funds to construct State and municipal buildings while denying his district money for a postoffice. He knows, too, that all the general arguments in favor of retrenchment as an aid to a balanced budget have "gone by the board." So why not dig deeply into the pork barrel for his own constituents in advance of a general election?

The President can attract considerable support for his pump-priming program by yielding to such demands. Having abandoned his own economy plans, he no longer need worry about charges of inconsistency. The amount of money involved, moreover, seems insignificant in view of the vast sums for which the President himself has asked. Under the circumstances, the Administration will unquestionably be tempted to garner votes for its major spending program by throwing a few choice bits of pork to the hungry.

Laws And More Laws.

From the Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Moses was presented with only Ten Commandments and Woodrow Wilson delivered 14 points to the Versailles Peace Conference, but legislatures of 43 American States in regular sessions last year enacted 18,483 new laws. The record is a tribute to the ingenuity of the Senators and Representatives who from coast to coast have joyously assumed the burden of regulating other people's lives.

That only 1,245, or about 7 per cent, of these bills were vetoed would suggest that some State executives were not so alert as they might be.

First prize goes to Minnesota, where, out of 3,037 proposals for the salvation of organized society, only 495 were enacted. Ohio's record could be worse. Of the 1,085 measures cast before the lawgivers at Columbus only 208 were approved.

Thomas Jefferson proclaimed that the government is best which governs least. He would be more than mildly surprised were he to observe this interesting and somewhat alarming development in the democracy he helped to found for the protection of the rights of man.

The District Tax Bill.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your recent editorial suggestion that the Senate substitute a corporation net income tax for the so-called "business privilege" tax deserves the thanks of your readers. It indicates a clear understanding of the evils of regressive taxation and the best interests of the community as a whole.

Available statistics show that a 6 per cent corporate net income tax would yield, conservatively estimated, over $2,000,000, the amount estimated for the "business privilege" tax. Corporations filing returns in the District paid Federal net income taxes of $5,852,000 for the year covering fiscal periods ending in 1935-36. At an effective tax rate of 15 per cent, actually nearer 14½ per cent, these collections indicate a net taxable income of over $39,000,000. This does not include net income earned in the District of Columbia by corporations filing outside the District, which undoubtedly exceeded net income of corporations filing in D. C., but earned outside the District.

Allowing for a 15 per cent decline in net taxable income between 1935-36 and 1938, and excluding revenues to be derived from the sources indicated in the previous sentence, the yield would be over $2,000,000.

The District Committee of the Senate is said to have reported business privilege tax to the Senate because it believes that the House will not accept an income tax. A careful reading of the House debate on the District revenue bill shows not a single objection to the corporate net income tax. Its deletion from the bill as passed is the result of its being lumped with the personal income tax, with its ill-advised exemptions of Congressmen, etc. There is no ground for the belief that the House will not accept a corporate net income tax.

Who Appoints Apprentices.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A letter to The Post of April 17 signed "Monitor," among other things said, "Let any of the young men coming out of school try to enter the field dominated by union labor; he will find that only the relatives of the men already in the union have any hope of getting on as apprentices."

To informed people the above is laughable. I would like to inform this writer that the union, or union man have absolutely nothing to do with the appointing of the apprentices. The employer who pays the apprentice and he only has this authority. He may hire his son or some relation or whom he wishes and the union must take it and like it. Frequently, however, the employer requests the union to recommend an apprentice and a union man would be a poor advocate of unionism and a poor father, indeed, who would not recommend his own son, or relative or some one who would realize unionism as the only savior of the wage earner.

Views On District Suffrage.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In the final analysis the problem of District suffrage is an economic one, and the antagonism of the moneyed interests is due to the fear that when the people rule this city the rich will lose their favored position and that the poor man will receive his fair share of the taxes he pays.

Successful democratic government cannot be attained until all the workers, whether Jew or Gentile, Protestant or Catholic, black or white, realize that they have the same problems and are willing to accord to each other a just and fair share of the benefits of their common government. Therefore let us all rally to support the vote on Saturday and thereby open the door of hope for a better government for our city, the Nation's Capital.

HOWARD D. WOODSON.
Washington, April 27.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Is it not true that if suffrage is granted the District of Columbia such grant will prove but a decided step in the eventual distruction of the co-operation between the Federal and State governments? Will it not be but a natural result that those citizens retaining their vote in the home States will drift into voting in the District?

If such happens the tie now existing will be destroyed, for after all our principles are dependent upon the people for their expression. Is it not true that in other countries where the balance of power was enjoyed by the most populous districts—the cities—it resulted in a detriment to those of the less populated rural communities?

Is it not possible to grant all citizens of the District of Columbia a voice in the affairs of their Nation—speaking of those qualified therefor—by merging them for such representation into the State of their paternal or maternal ancestor? Is it not true that those citizens not having such ancestry, but who are qualified for such expression, could be allowed national representation through those States not so densely populated?

ELISABETH C. DECOURCY.
Washington, April 28.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In regard to suffrage for the District of Columbia I would like to say:

The "setup" of the United States included a district for the seat of the Federal Government and did not take into account the future interposing of "a State" in that area.

If I were in the position of many property owners in the District (I do not own property here), I might enter more into their feeling of the right to representation in local government on account of taxation. But I think I would take a broader view of the matter and be content to allow the Federal Government to retain control of the seat of government as originally intended by the founders of the Nation.

A WOMAN LAWYER.
Washington, April 27.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: And the realms of the King were greater than were ever known and its people were rich. Then the King set off unto himself a place on which he builded palaces and statues of marble in honor of all the people, and from afar the people came and walked in the King's garden, among the palaces where his wise men lived and conducted the affairs of the King and of his people, and they went away saying: "Great is the country of the King and great are we the people," and they gave thanks for the King and for the country and for the King's house.

Now there were certain ones whom the King had permitted to live near his house and among his gardens and the palaces, who murmured and said: "Why should not we who live here conduct the affairs of this place and take from the King his power to rule his city?"

And the King was vexed and said unto those who had come into his city to live: "Behold, ye are like one who, being invited to a house to sup and to spend the night, quarrels at the host and with the servants of the host and directs what shall be served at the banquet and where they shall sit, until the host regretted that the man had been invited; take heed, therefore, lest I thrust you beyond the walls of the city, which is for all of the people, and the people, for your ingratitude, refuse to receive you."

Anthony On Rushmore?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: One of the most degrading implications regarding the status of women in their own country lies in the passage of a series of congressional acts appropriating funds and more funds for the building of the Mount Rushmore National Memorial. This project immortalizes four outstanding leaders in American history, but utterly ignores the woman movement begun in 1848.

We have in Susan B. Anthony, who was the acknowledged leader of the movement for half a century, the peer of any of the men being honored in the Mount Rushmore group; and in her conception of what real democracy means, the superior of every one of them. Theirs was a democracy for men. Hers was a democracy for man, woman and child. The splendid contribution of American womanhood today, made possible by the life work of our great emancipator, sheds no fame or glory on her or on them. Because she is a woman and for that reason alone would "ruin" the memorial if included, she is being ruthlessly sacrificed. Indeed, we are all reduced to a cipher in this historic commemoration through her exclusion.

Congress has authority to legislate a place for Susan Anthony. Will our legislators do it, or are they also going to participate in a shameful "gentlemen's agreement" to let down this "Mother in Israel" and all the women she liberated—including their own mothers, wives, and daughters? If they adopt the alternative, their names will go down to posterity in dishonor. Historians of the woman movement will record this crime of the twentieth century so that future generations shall know of the great betrayal.

Philippine Leaders.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am one of the growing number of Filipinos who can't understand the position of President Manuel Quezon on Philippines independence. Is he for or against independence? So far as I can make out he is against independence.

What makes me all the more confused is the attitude of former Senator Harry B. Hawes, lawyer of the Philippine Sugar Association, and other business bodies. He used to be for our independence, but now is against it.

What can we poor Filipinos do? We want to follow a leadership, and we don't know what our leaders are trying to do. S. C. AVAN.

The "McNutt Palaces."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The "McNutt palaces" in the Philippines should be built by our Government without delay. The palaces will be the home of our diplomatic representatives when the Philippines become an independent nation, which I hope will be next year. HELEN P. McGRADY.
Alexandria, Va., April 24.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Frank Murphy, Governor of Michigan, is solely responsible for the United States Government buildings to be put up in Manila and Baguio, Philippines, now called by Representative Engel the "McNutt palaces."

I favor the construction of those "palaces." They are needed.

Railroad Passes.

During the first six months of 1937 United States railways issued over 3,000,000 free passes and tickets to persons other than employes, involving 601,000,000 passenger miles with an estimated value of $11,334,000, or 5.36 per cent of the passenger revenue of the same period.

In certain cases this percentage ran as high as 10 per cent of passenger revenue, indicating that some railways gave away more complimentary service to other railways than they received.

The Post Impressionist

But Not Drab.

THE usual fears assailed Mrs. Penfold as she seated herself at the speakers' table behind a scraggly arrangement of spring flowers.

Had she remembered to go easy on the lipstick, as becomes the wife of a college professor noted for his knowledge of the money system? Or had she been too sparing of her make-up? Demure but not drab—that was the standard she had set for herself the memorable day of George's first speech, and she liked to think that she had done pretty well. Nevertheless, she wished there had been a mirror in the elevator which brought them to the banquet hall. A final reassuring glance at her appearance always gave her confidence.

She also wished, as she brushed an imaginary bit of lint from the front of her dress, that the prevailing fashion did not demand quite such close-fitting lines.

As the boullion was served, she told herself sternly that the first rule of social success is to forget one's self. She turned to the earnest young man at her right. Thanks to a cultivated power of concentration, she remembered that he had been introduced to her as secretary of the society which was giving the luncheon.

"You must have a very large membership," she said, at the same time switching on a smile which, she was sure, radiated charm and geniality without seeming flirtatious. "How many would you say are in the hall—400?"

"Roughly, 500," the young man said.

Half a thousand! There were only 50 the time George made his first speech.

"We usually have a couple hundred more," he added. Mrs. Penfold decided there was something unpleasant about his manner. She dimmed the magnetic smile.

The waiters brought the main course—stringy lamb chops and a mixture of vaguely familiar vegetables. Mrs. Penfold abandoned her effort to draw out the secretary and surveyed the dining room. Perhaps all the members weren't there, but she was sure the more intellectual ones had turned out. Even the ladies, most of whom wore pince nez and severely cut hats, looked as though they were interested in the money system. Better a small audience of savants than a horde of morons, she reflected.

Studying the tailored costumes of the lady members, Mrs. Penfold became even more painfully aware of the snug fit of her dress. She must get some sort of a conservative suit better adapted to the wife of an eminent economist—conservative but dashing. She would speak to George about it after the meeting.

George was adjusting his spectacles with one hand and fingering the breast pocket where he kept his notes with the other. Nervous as ever, poor dear, although she had listened to him rehearse his speech a dozen times. She recalled that even the most seasoned actors suffer acute stage fright, and smiled down the table at him sympathetically.

The chairman tapped on his water glass and launched a glowing introduction of the speaker of the afternoon. Mrs. Penfold wished that her husband would restrain a tendency to look sheepish at such moments. You could hardly expect a monetary expert to have perfect poise, she admitted to herself, but there was such a thing as self-confidence.

Five hundred faces, alert with intelligent interest, turned toward the speaker's table as George rose. He does look distinguished, Mrs. Penfold thought. A sprinkling of gray at his temples was beginning to mature the expression of boyish bewilderment which had worried her earlier in his career as a financial wizard.

She settled back in her chair, assuming her usual expression of rapt attention seasoned with wifely awe. She thought she detected a wave of envy emanating from the pince nez and becoming stronger with each erudite statement George uttered.

Mrs. Penfold started out of a daydream and realized that half an hour had passed. There was something astonishingly soothing about George's delivery. After readjusting her rapt expression, she turned to look out over the upturned faces. One pair of pince nez was glaring at her sternly. Others still stared at George, but the alertness, Mrs. Penfold noted with anguish, had given way to a sort of glazed look. Still others were frankly nodding.

After all, these people were not up to comprehending the abstruse matters George was trying to convey to them, laden as his talk must inevitably be with accurate statistics. She felt a little sorry for these limited intellects who strove so hard for knowledge.

The nodding pince nez lurched upright and joined the enthusiastic applause which followed George's final period. Mrs. Penfold smiled encouragingly at her husband as he crumpled his notes and sank back into his seat.

The elevator doors closed behind them. Mrs. Penfold, still smiling, opened her mouth to broach the question of a new suit. Her husband looked at her despairingly.

"They fell asleep," he said. "I'll never be a speaker—can't you see that now? Don't ask me to do it again."

As he turned his head away, Mrs. Penfold thought she noticed a tiny bald spot.

Mentally, she saw a smart twill suit, complete with accessories, flutter on invisible wings into the unattainable distance. She could have cried with disappointment.

Fair Enough

Two Retired Guys.

THERE WAS a gentle, kind old man stopping at the inn on the shore of the Gulf of Mexico a few days ago who somehow looked familiar and turned out to be Harry Daugherty, the Attorney General and tough guy of the Warren G. Harding Presidency. Time has changed Mr. Daugherty. He is 76 years old now and softened up by the blows of personal and political tragedy. His wife died after 28 years of invalidism; his son, Draper, the pride and hope of his younger days, died some years ago, and of course the smash and scandal of the Harding Administration left scars even on the cast-iron hide of a man who was more furiously hated by more personal enemies, I suppose, than any other American since Abraham Lincoln.

PEGLER

I once was assigned to follow Mr. Daugherty to Miami and wherever else he might go at a time when there was some thought that he might jump the country and hole up in some banana port to avoid examination as a witness in certain phases of the Ohio regime in Washington.

Knowing that Mr. Daugherty was very sick, and wanting not to be a nuisance, I proposed to him after several days' surveillance that we make a deal. I was to let him alone and he promised to tell me in good time when he was leaving and where he was going. A week later he telephoned that he was going back to Washington that night, and that was all there was to it.

• • • •

BUT THE OLD MAN chuckled the other night as we sat in the dark on the front porch at the thought of a reporter trailing an Attorney General of the United States who had William J. Burns and his department fly cops doing the same to many worthy citizens. He had J. Edgar Hoover, too, and Gaston Means, the foulest crook, at a rough estimate, that this country has ever produced.

Mr. Daugherty has been blind in one eye and deaf in one ear for many years, and now his good eye and ear are none too good, but good enough, at that, says he, to see and hear the little good that there is in the world. He lives almost altogether in the past now, in the company of men who have died since the Ohio crowd went whooping into Washington with prohibition and Wayne Wheeler.

In his time he ripped and slashed for power and came on to be the personal boss of a President of the United States, so it was a little comic that night when the woman with the little boy planned to go to the movies and the old-time tyrant told her to run right along and not worry, for he, Harry Daugherty, personally would sit up in the rocker in the dark at the foot of the little boy's bed and watch over him.

I mean no wrong to Mr. Daugherty when I say that irresistibly I was reminded of Damon Runyon's story of the retired safe blower and the kid, called "Butch Minds the Baby." He said the little boy looked just like his boy Draper at the same age, and he would like to sit in the dark and rock and cover him if he stirred or get him a drink—or anything.

• • • •

NEXT DAY Karl Bickel came over—Bickel, the former president of the United Press, who batted around the world for years and years and clawed his way to the top in tough competition, and then suddenly chucked it to retire to a drowsy, sunny little town 'way down the Florida gulf coast and putter in little interests such as the Cabana Club and Don Halton's Free Clinic for the sallow children of the pure Anglo-Saxon backwoods crackers.

It costs $5 overhead to detach a cracker child from his or her adenoids and tonsils and free the patient of hookworm, and the doctor, whose services are tossed in free, is now working on his last batch in the entire county, a group of 20.

Mr. Daugherty and Mr. Bickel sometimes sat in the sun, two retired guys who were fierce and fast in action so short a time ago, talking like Noah and the hero of the Johnstown flood, of times gone past. And there was a man in the placid little community who went about leading a soft-eyed gentle old grayhound on a leash.

"Nice dog you have there," Mr. Bickel said. "Is he a racing dog?"

"He was," the man said. "He was a racing dog. His name is Smiles. He was a very good, fast dog, but one night he caught the rabbit. After that they lose interest. They discover that the thing they have been chasing so hard is just a phoney, and they just lie down in the box and watch the other dogs run, like saying, 'Go ahead and run yourselves ragged for a mess of hair and sawdust!' "

Both Mr. Daugherty and Mr. Bickel took a liking to Smiles, and he would stretch out in some shady spot, sigh deeply and go to sleep.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Ireland at Peace.

Eire (Ireland to you) and Great Britain have buried the shillalah and signed agreements to live as friends and neighbors after 700 years of mutual distrust.

• • • •

You get an idea how topsy-turvy this world has gone when it is the Irish who wants to stop fighting.

• • • •

Representatives of Ireland and Great Britain met in Downing Street the other day and signed papers which made them look like a pair of love-birds.

• • • •

The Irish and the British delegates even made peace without anybody getting hurt. Not an eye was blackened in the mutual declarations of brotherly love.

• • • •

One of the most amazing features of the agreement was that England surrenders to Ireland the British naval bases at Berehaven, Cobh and Lough Swilly, "together with all magazines, guns and munitions." When John Bull turns over naval bases and supplies to Ireland a world-peace movement may seriously be assumed to have gotten under way.

• • • •

The agreement permits an Irish navy. And no matter how small it may be it will be one navy we would hate to have to fight.

• • • •

The more we think of this Irish navy the more we are for it. Turn an Irish navy loose and all these other nations that are out on the high seas looking for trouble would be satisfied in no time.

• • • •

In fact, it might be a swell idea to give an Irish navy the job of enforcing world peace.

• • • •

Under the terms of the new agreement all British soldiers and sailors are withdrawn from Irish soil. The Irish held out against this at first. They wanted to have England leave a few of 'em around Dublin so an Irishman would know what to do when he felt a rock in his hand.

• • • •

To Eamon de Valera goes the credit for the Irish New Deal. Twenty-two years ago Eamon was arrested and narrowly escaped execution after the Easter uprisings in Dublin. This week even the English cheered him as "Good old Devvie!"

It's all done by mirrors. And in this case the reflections are very satisfactory.

We know a businessman who is having so much trouble making both ends meet that he moved from an apartment to a furnished room and numbered it "77-B."

Pennsylvania Linen

Approach Of May 17 Primaries In Keystone State Heralded By Sharp Democratic Split, With Labor Holding Whip.

By Eugene Pharo.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Philadelphia.

WHEN FRIENDS fall out, the truth comes out too. That is the conclusion that a number of discouraged idealists are coming to, as Pennsylvania's May 17 primaries approach. For there are so many contests that everyone's linen is being washed in public either by consistent opponents, or by former friends who have come to the parting of the ways. And promising political booms, carefully nurtured political dictatorships, and fat fortunes have been deflated or are tottering in the balance. Yet it remains true that the primaries, at least so far as the dominant Democratic Party is concerned, will be chiefly significant as showing how much influence labor currently exerts in settling political issues.

This fundamental issue persists, in spite of the fact that at present the chief labor candidate, who is running for the governorship—namely, Lieutenant Governor Thomas Kennedy, secretary-treasurer of the United Mine Workers—is not making the first page as often as those who are mixed up in the colorful charges and innuendoes of the above-mentioned public washing of dirty linen. Like Br'er Fox, he just lay low and say nothing.

The chief blow, to those who have tried to believe that Gov. Earle's administration of Pennsylvania was on the highest possible plane, and that it justified thinking of him as a possible President of the United States, has been in charges made by members of his own administration as well as by opponents, that he has allowed the worst kind of political graft to undermine his program.

Mayor Wilson Chosen To Lead War On Earle.

THE MOST DIRECT and specific charge of this nature was made recently by Mayor S. Davis Wilson, of Philadelphia, who has finally decided to register as a Democrat and to run against Gov. Earle for nomination as United States Senator. Mr. Wilson has carried on a feud with the Governor for the last two years, and was chosen aptly to start the most serious attack on his integrity that has been made to date. This was included in the charge that the Governor had borrowed $30,000 from Matthew H. McCloskey, "co-leader" of Philadelphia's Democratic machine, and that Mr. McCloskey, a contractor by trade, had been given nearly $10,000,000 worth of State contracts. The story is told in more detail than that, but the essence of it is in the foregoing sentence, and the details have been given wide publicity.

Gov. Earle has acknowledged borrowing the money and offered proof that he has paid back all but $6,000 of it. He has said further that the contracts in question were not in prospect when he made the loan. But this explanation, and his denial of improper influence, has come very far short of wiping out the impression that Mayor Wilson has made with the disclosure. Nor is the mayor neglecting to strengthen that impression with a wealth of innuendo, at every possible opportunity.

[This article was written before Gov. Earle had dismissed his attorney general, Charles J. Margiotti, who is a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Governor, for refusing to present evidence to support his bribery charges brought against three leaders in State Democratic circles.

[Following this action, Mayor Wilson called for the resignation of the three men assailed by Margiotti and added a demand that Gov. Earle step down from his post as Democratic national committeeman.—Editor.]

Politics Indicated In Relief Administration.

EARLIER in the year, two members of the Governor's own administration began to do their share to disclose to the public a fact that most weather-wise politicians take for granted; which is, that political considerations, rather than simon-pure regard for the public good, dictate many of the actions of a Governor.

There was the resignation from the post of State Secretary of Public Assistance, of Karl de Schweinitz, a professional social worker, who charged that political considerations hampered the carrying out of public relief, and the prompt appointment to that post of Arthur W. Howe, jr., a personal friend of Earle, and a former salesman for the Earle sugar concern.

In discussing the interference of Democratic county chairmen with the appointment of county boards of relief, Mr. De Schweinitz declared, "The suggestions of public-spirited citizens and civic organizations for the membership of these boards, were almost entirely disregarded, except when they happened to coincide with recommendations previously made by the county chairmen, or, in a few instances, were accepted by them. The membership of many of these boards promises nothing better than what the poor boards represented. It is no longer a question of preventing politics from entering relief. The door has already been opened."

Beginning near the first of the year, State Attorney General Margiotti, who proudly refers to the fact that he started work at 11 years of age as a water boy, and later was a laborer in brick yards, and who is ambitious to be nominated as Governor, began to make charges of the undue influence of political bosses. And he offered himself as a candidate for office on the plea that he would not permit himself to be so pulled around by party bosses as, he inferred, Mr. Earle has been.

Guffey And Stern Turn Against Governor.

UP TO DATE two influences in the State that had most to do with building up Gov. Earle as a political figure, have shown respect for their former support of the Governor by refraining from impugning his integrity. They have merely set about casting doubts on his good sense, and his qualities as a political leader and New Deal messiah. These are Senator Joe Guffey, who has aligned himself with the labor power behind Kennedy's candidacy, and David Stern, publisher of the Philadelphia Record.

Both Guffey and Stern have struck at Earle through McCloskey, the contractor boss who loaned the Governor money. McCloskey's influence, they claim, is dragging the Democratic Party down to the grafting level of the Republican machine dominated by Penrose and the Vares. Therefore he and those whose candidacy he favors—including the entire roster of regularly indorsed candidates of the Democratic State committee—should be put on the shelf on May 17; and Guffey's candidates be named.

Earle, as a candidate for the Senate, is on the State committee slate. Kennedy (for Governor) and Mayor Wilson (for the Senate) are the leading lights on the slate favored by Joe Guffey and Dave Stern—not to mention their support, lately little touted, by John L. Lewis. Nor is there any question in the minds of most observers that the reason Kennedy and Mayor Wilson are favored by Senator Guffey and Mr. Stern, is the latter's belief that organized labor will succeed in nominating those candidates; just as it was largely instrumental four years ago in electing their now discarded candidate, George H. Earle 3d.

If Mr. Guffey is right, as shown by the returns on May 17, a good many shifts in planning national political policies may be expected, in addition to the final deflation of the tentative Presidential boom that was started in 1937 for Mr. Earle—under the fanciful and already almost forgotten designation "Crown Prince of the New Deal."

Historic Treaties On View Today at Archives Building

Some of America's most famous treaties, including the one that ended the Revolutionary War, will go on exhibition at the Archives Building today.

The peace pact with Great Britain signed on September 3, 1783, bears signatures of John Adams, Benjamin Franklin, John Jay and British Commissioner Hartley. George III signed the British Instrument of Ratification, dated April 9, 1784.

Other exhibits include a document signed by Napoleon Bonaparte, the Treaty of Ghent, the Sino-American treaty of 1844, the treaty that terminated the Mexican War, the so-called Perry Treaty with Japan, the Alaska cession document bearing the signature of Tsar Alexander II, log book of the U. S. S. Olympia telling of the Battle of Manila Bay, Commodore Dewey's report on that engagement and a copy of the order dispatching him to Yokohama as commander-in-chief of the Asiatic Station.

Angler's Angle

By Scott Hart.

IT IS OFTEN SUGGESTED that the authors get all the praise while the publishers are left to suck their thumbs beside the presses, gaining nothing for their pains unless it be the inconsiderable consolation of clipping coupons.

The Derrydale Press, however, has stopped the author in his sportsmen's boots. Delights of the binding lure the eye; lure it away from the printed page. You are reading "Upstream and Down" and liking it for the fine sporting book it is, but constantly you're saying: "What a job! Derrydale has outdone itself!"

• • • •

NOW FOR THE STORY, as told by Howard T. Walden 2d. He is the sort of sportsman whom Archibald Rutledge or Edmund Ware Smith would like to know and to walk the woods and fish the streams with.

Mr. Walden simply takes you fishing with himself and his friends, relating, between bites, the arts, the problems, the hopes and the sun-flecked lores of the streamways. And by some extraordinary gift, he is able to put a fisherman's thoughts on paper. All fishermen, you know, are profound thinkers; some stand by the secret streams and decide their party politics, or the answer to give their wives when the indictment of loafing in the woods is returned with the evening meal. Mr. Walden seems happily removed from these concerns; but notes the forests in mood and when the trout is once on the moss, can see things this way:

> Though I could not express it he seemed then—and he seems still!—a crystalization in the flesh of all the changing character of a running stream: the suavity of deep water, the dusky immobility of a still pool, the gay abandon of a rapid and the incalculable play of light and shadow over them all. It is as if he were born of these patterns of nature rather than by the biological processes of eggs and fertilization, as if some unapprehended chemistry of beauty had precipitated this life form from a rare combination of elements: shadow and white sun, clean sand and mossy stone, roots and the derelict leaves, the ease of the tideless backwater and the high strife of the central current. All of the endless diversity of the stream is there, before he begins to fade in death, in that amazing color and in the clean fair lines of the fish, the immaculate continuity of head and body, body and tail.

THAT IS A FAIR sample of his writing. It also suggests, too, a certain misgiving of conscience. The same apprehensions beset the more robust Rutledge in his latest book, "An American Hunter." We think it too bad. Both sportsmen are conscious of all the bellow and whine against hunting and fishing. Mr. Walden, as his writing indicates, is a sensitive man. He has heard the cry that all hunters and fishermen are sadists, who find exquisite joys in the death pants of a deer, in the reproach in a killed partridge's eyes on in the death throes of a shad. This is regrettable. The whole question is one on which most men have made up their minds so definitely, one way or the other, that the truth of it no longer seems to matter.

Mr. Walden gives his last chapter to a discussion of the ethics of killing for sport; but he is gentleman enough to leave the question of killing wild game to each man's conscience! Rutledge doesn't take so mild a view. More realistically, he has argued, that you eat lamb and ram and bull and mutton and he asks how this provender came to your table. Surely, these beasts weren't given ether to ease the passing. And with so much said, Rutledge shoots another deer to top off the stew from the lamb, which also had to die.

Mr. Walden broods more. This is obvious between the lines; but the reason is not clear. His own execution of game is so skillful that one is left to wish that all transactions between man and man might be as painless and for so wholesome a purpose. And he might take comfort in the reflection that no way has been devised to eat meat without killing it, and if an ounce of sport is thrown into the bargain the animal suffers less than in one of Chicago's more refined slaughterhouses.

• • • •

THIS BOOK should be read by those opposed to the killing of wild game under any circumstances. They would see clearly the difference between sportsmen and hunters and maybe their pain would be relieved. There are two sets of reference work on the subject. One the great batch of press releases by the U. S. Biological Survey on the number of pot hunters now sweating in the pokey for criminal slaughter of game. You read these and congratulate the Government on jailing a set of menaces. On the other hand, when you read the ways of a gentleman in the woods you want to go fishing with him.

A Runyon Garland

By Ross O'Donoghue.

THERE IS A STORY to the effect that an American once traveled through Europe and was received everywhere right royally by the simple expedient of posing as a gangster. It makes no difference that he was as much of a "phonus bolonus" as any Russian count to be found on this side of the Atlantic, for the point of the tale is that there is nothing Europeans admire more than American slang unless it be American gangsters.

But the delight in the ingenuity of the men from the States in devising improvements in the King's English runs the respect for the native American criminal a close second, especially in England where innovations in the native tongue are especially appreciated. As everyone knows who has read Mr. Mencken's "American Language," and as most intelligent Englishmen recognize, only the American branch of the language is virile enough to be developing. Only by taking the crumbs from the table of its American cousin can the English of England maintain an appearance of life and growth.

It is no wonder, then, that Damon Runyon is popular in England, for no American can give such concentrated combined doses of American slang and the American (or at least the New York) underworld while maintaining his equanimity and humor. The present volume was compiled by an English admirer (who has, of course, fallen under Runyon's spell and can hardly write except in the present tense) and designed for an English audience. It was only that reciprocal American admiration for English taste that prompted its republication in the United States. We can sincerely thank the English for the book, because it really is a typical collection of Runyon's stuff. Most of the stories are from the days of prohibition when all the "guys" dealt in "merchandise" and all the "dolls" inhabited night clubs. It will probably be a pretty heady dose for the average Englishman, but it can be recommended to Americans even to those who are afraid of too much stimulation.

Out of Season

Winter Closes.

The winter closes hard upon the land,
 Snuffing the maple torch. A wavering mist
 Mantles the stubble fields with amethyst,
November spills the harvest from her hand;
The ivy's broken leafage on the wall
 Frays to a crumpled crispness of defeat,
 And where the wood smoke curled the spiraled, sweet
Aroma fills the meadows of late fall.
Winter is closing hard upon its prey,
And whiteness walks where once the hills were gray.

The Monopoly Laws

Following is a partial text of the address of Thurman Arnold, the Assistant Attorney General, at the annual banquet of the Trade and Commerce Bar Association in New York last night:

No government policy has received such long and unquestioned public acceptance as that expressed by the Sherman antitrust act. The domination of market by small groups and the concentration of wealth and power in a few have been a matter of continuing public concern for over 40 years. . . . We have become a nation of employes. Our private property, our security in old age and the care of our families when we die usually consist of claims held directly or indirectly against great industrial organizations.

Our problem is therefore to define the public responsibility of such organizations, and to determine where industrial efficiency ends and industrial empire building begins. As a practical matter, indicated in the President's statement of February 18, the question of prices overshadows the entire subject.

We are accustomed to think of prices for building material, for aluminum kitchen utensils and for the various other things which are essential to decent living, as different from taxes. But when these prices are set by a group which dominates the market, the only difference between such prices and taxes is the fact that such prices are levied without public responsibility or public control, and that their proceeds are used for private and not for public purposes. . . .

Monopoly Forces Government Interference.

The great mass of our population sell their goods, and services, and labor in the competitive market. This is certainly at least one of the reasons why the income tax figures for 1935 show only 2,110,890 taxable incomes of over $2,500 for married persons and $1,000 for single persons in a nation of 130,000,000. . . .

In general, I think we agree that an efficient industrial organization is one capable of producing goods in quantities sufficient and at prices low enough to insure them a permanent place in an American standard of living. This means that whenever competition is destroyed there is no alternative except to interfere with and regulate arbitrary power to maintain rigid prices.

Today the monopoly problem has become so acute that the President has suggested the need for strengthening the antitrust laws and for new legislation relating to an antitrust policy. I am not, however, going to talk this evening on the antitrust laws as they should be. That problem is before Congress. I am going to speak on the antitrust laws as they are, which is the only present problem before the Department of Justice. * * *

The assessment of the blame for what has happened in the past, while an interesting theological enterprise, gives no solution whatever. The duty before the Department of Justice is not to preach against the misdeeds of those who have gone before us, but to devise methods of utilizing the antitrust procedure which is at its disposal efficiently and fairly. That, therefore, is the subject of my address. * * *

Anti-Trust Regulation Vital in Depressions.

Definiteness and precision in this area have been impossible even for the courts. It is even more impossible for the prosecuting arm of the Government which is trying to follow a consistent policy of treating the mass of violations, not all of which can be prosecuted or even investigated. Yet none of the pressing problems of Government can be solved by rule of thumb. * * *

The first question of policy which I think should be publicly answered is why we ought not to exercise our judgment and discretion in slowing up antitrust prosecution during the present period of depression in order to give the business the confidence to expand. The legalistic answer to that question is easy. It is found in our national belief in the efficacy of law enforcement as an end in itself.

A better answer is found in the examination of economic reality. It is my conviction that from a long-range point of view the vigorous enforcement of antitrust laws is never more important than during periods of economic recession . . . It is during these periods that the smaller firms, weakened by declining sales and profits, are most susceptible to destruction as the result of practices denounced by the antitrust laws. . . . The clock cannot be turned back when prosperity returns again. It is extremely difficult to re-create competitive organizations which have been destroyed, because effective organizations are the result of habits and discipline and teamwork. . . . Therefore the further an industry proceeds along the road to monopoly the more difficult is the application of the antitrust laws, for the reason that the antitrust laws in themselves cannot rebuild the competitive organizations which have been destroyed.

Oppose Agreements To Restrict Production.

There are pressures peculiar to times of depression to maintain former high prices by agreements to restrict production, on the principle of the necessity of an orderly market. We naturally cannot sanction such distortions of a beneficent principle.

A second question of policy important in the antitrust cases is the recognition that results in restraint of trade are more important than the intent which lies behind them. . . . It is therefore my belief that in the selection of cases and also in the trial and presentation of cases we should formulate our standard in terms of the actual results and use of legal privileges by groups in achieving domination of the market rather than their motive.

I will illustrate by the case of Interstate Circuit, Inc., vs. United States recently argued before the Supreme Court of the United States. A first-run motion picture exhibitor controlling 75 per cent of the moving pictures in Texas had entered into practically identical contracts with the major motion picture distributors which prevent second-run theaters from obtaining the best pictures except at higher admission prices than they had been accustomed to charge.

Here was a typical use of a legal privilege (the copyright) in such a way as to restrict the outlets for moving pictures and actually to destroy competition. . . . The moral question in the case was whether a conspiracy existed. To solve this it was necessary to see the shadowy line where a conspiracy ends and good fellowship and co-operation begins.

Observe how the question proposed in another way admits a more practical answer. Is the use of the privilege given by the copyright laws by a group which actually dominates the market an effective suppression of competition regardless of whether a conspiracy is proved?

The Choice of Civil And Criminal Procedure.

The fact that picture houses have been closed and the distributing market has been narrowed by the use of this privilege on the part of a dominating group is certainly one of the most important factors in determining whether such a use of the copyright is illegal.

A third question of policy concerns the choice between the civil and criminal procedures. It is my belief that under the present laws the most effective deterrent lies on the criminal side of the court, in so far as the prevention of illegal practices is concerned. . . .

I can make clearer the advantages of the criminal procedure by using the analogy. . . . Take the familiar case which is repeated constantly in this country of a young man with respectable background, with every expectation of a useful and brilliant career who, in order to meet a social engagement, exceeds the speed laws and kills a pedestrian. . . .

No one would deny that such cases should be vigorously prosecuted. No one would assert that the prosecuting attorney should evade his responsibility to submit such cases to a jury. No one would pretend that an injunction which prevented the young man from doing it again would be an effective way to solve the problem of the reckless driver who may, in spite of his respectable background, be more dangerous to society than the burglar.

Impossible to Detect All the Violations.

This is the kind of a crime committed by those who violate antitrust laws, under various business pressures to expand and to get as much of the market as possible. Such pressures can only be offset by a deterrent involving the risk of social stigma.

The efficacy of the criminal penalty is illustrated in many cases which have been brought to my attention where corporate directors are willing to spend large sums of money belonging to the corporation in order to avoid the social stigma of a small individual fine. . . . During such battles attorneys live magnificently.

A fourth question of policy deals with the use of the civil and criminal proceedings concurrently, and in obtaining a consent decree in cases where the final outcome of the criminal case is uncertain, and relief to competitors and to the public is even more important than punishment of offenders delayed by long trials and appeals.

It is the position of the department that it was the intention of Congress in providing these two concurrent penalties that they should be used. In spite of the confusion recently created, the law on this point is, I think, clear.

I know of no ethical policy which contradicts the plain provisions of the act of Congress or which forbids criminal prosecutions while negotiations for the consent decree is pending. However, the test of a consent decree obtained under such circumstances must be relief to the public which would be denied by delay. It should not be on the basis on which private litigation is compromised. One is concerned with the past; the other with the future.

The fifth question of policy which I wish to discuss is in some respects most important of all. It concerns making public the decisions and attitudes of the Department of Justice in the selection and prosecution of cases. The aim of such a policy is to give buinessmen both guides and warnings in a field which is as admittedly uncertain in definition as the conception of reckless driving on the highway.

Favors Preliminary Statements of Intent.

The reason for such a policy is that there is no way that I know of to avoid the use of discretion and judgment in the conduct of the antitrust division All complaints can not be prosecuted. A selection must be made. Therefore, the grounds underlying that selection should be publicly stated in each case to the end that a consistent and open policy of prosecution may gradually be derived from statements in connection with individual cases.

Obviously, however, it is unsafe to convey that information by promises of immunity to individuals on the bases of the data which they submit. . . .

The only safe way of building up information as to department attitudes and policy is through announcements made at the beginning of each procedure, whether it be an investigation or an indictment, or a civil prosecution.

Suppose the X company has over a period of years crushed competition in its industrial area until there is little likelihood of reviving it by the enforcement of an antitrust decree. Suppose that during the past 20 years there has been such governmental acquiescence in this process that as a practical matter criminal prosecution would be unsuccessful. Suppose the attention of the department is called to an additional expansion of the X company which will swallow up one of the few remaining competitors and that civil suit is authorized.

Suggests Way to Take Care of Future Cases.

To explain its policy in bringing that suit, the department might publish a careful analysis giving first, the conditions in the industry, second, the reason for its selection for a civil prosecution, and third, the economic result it hopes to accomplish. In this particular hypothetical case, assume that no far reaching economic results would be expected. It should then be frankly stated that the reason for bringing the suit was to put the X company on notice that no further acquisitions would be tolerated.

This would at least lay the foundation for a criminal prosecution for a repetition of such conduct in the future. The report might then go on to state that structure of the X company is in itself a violation of the antitrust laws, but that in view of the improbability of recreating within a reasonable period of time by antitrust prosecution the competition which has been destroyed the department was using its personnel to push cases under which greater economic results would be expected.

This would not be a waiver of the antitrust laws or agreement of immunity. It would only be a reason for the present determination to prosecute given in public and subject to criticism and to revision by Congress . . . If the department was wrong in its conclusion, it could be brought before the bar of congressional judgment.

After such a report, any businessman connected with the industry could make an informed judgment about the interpretation of the antitrust laws by the department in that particular area.

If each important suit were prefaced by such a statement of policy there would be built up gradually within the department a reasonably consistent policy which would be a matter of public record . . .

Duties of Department To Court and Congress.

This seems to me to be the only solution to the problem of bringing the present concealed process of the necessary selection of cases out into the open where it can be a guide and a warning . . . No rule which has to apply to completely unlike conditions under dissimilar situations can ever be more than the statement of an ideal. We already have complete acceptance of the ideal. What we lack is a series of public applications of that ideal to particular industries which will give it more definite application.

I conceive of the duty of the Department of Justice both to the courts and to Congress. To the courts they owe the duty of fair and able presentation of the particular cases which they prosecute. To Congress they owe the duty of marking out an intelligible line of policy of law enforcement. . . . Therefore, acting under the advice of the Attorney General, I propose to announce in connection with the particular cases or investigations which are instituted in the future enough information so that the exercise of the discretion in selecting the cases may be as consistent as public announcement and public criticism can make it. . . .

On examination by the Senate committee I stated that I believed that antitrust enforcement should be both vigorous and fair. This paper has been an attempt to give content to those words. By a continuing policy of public statement when individual cases are announced, I hope to make them even more concrete by giving them a particular application to the various dissimilar situations to which we must apply the general policies of the antitrust laws.

The antitrust act represents a public policy to keep open and free the channels of opportunity which have never been more important than today.

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

Of all the giants and heroes who have departed from the new streamlined, chromium-plated Washington, the one I miss the most is Lewis Douglas the erstwhile budget director . . . Not merely for his brilliance and charm.

Lothrop Stoddard . . . ethnic

* * * *

I miss him because I'd like to bicycle down to my office occasionally, and he was one official who made it respectable for a grown man to cycle downtown in the Capital. (I saw him the other evening at a dinner; he was looking fit as a fiddle.)

* * * *

After a Cabinet member alluded to certain eminent officials as "crackpots," a few of the bigshots seemed to wear a "Who, me?" expression on their faces, just briefly.

* * * *

CAPITAL CAVIAR: A group of editors didn't laugh when President Roosevelt told them they were very much like the D. A. R. dames . . . Only ideologically, of course . . . Overheard in a Government cafeteria: "What happens when a $2-a-day worker needs a $2-an-hour plumber?" . . . It's comic to see feminine tories struggle between appreciation of the President's charm and antipathy for his politics; usually the antipathy wins, believe it or not.

"—home on the range"

An official who has something to do with WPA artists is thinking of assigning a painter to immortalize in oils Vice President Garner's famous cracks about "new deal cowboys" and "letting the cattle fatten up a bit."

* * * *

It's to be in the "home on the range" tradition of Remington's cowboy pictures . . . But the new deal cowboy is to wear a mortar board with his chaps, and the fugitive doggies are to wear cutaways, striped pants and silk hats.

When it's finished, he isn't sure whether he'll present it to the White House or the Capitol.

* * * *

LOTHROP STODDARD

If you count all sorts of writing, lay and official, Washington is challenging New York's place as the Republic's literary center . . . One of the fixed stars in the Capital's literary heavens is Lothrop Stoddard, son of the famed travel lecturer who kept your grandmother goggle-eyed with the wonders of travels . . . Two decades ago Stoddard was appalled by the fact that there were so many Chinese, Mohammedans and other strange people in the world, and wrote several books about it. Some of these were translated for their delectation into Turkish and Arabic . . . Urbane, patrician, erudite Stoddard lets Cape Cod rejuvenate him from the strenuous life of Washington, looks 15 years younger than he is . . . His ideas on races have attained world-wide vogue. After looking the world over for 20 years in distant places, he has become a patriotic isolationist, an eloquent advocate for keeping the American nose out of other people's troubles.

* * * *

GILT OFF THE DOME: Some Government employes (in the Weather Bureau) work for $1.50 a day . . . If a Government official takes his wife along on a trip, it's assumed that she slept in the lower and he in the upper, and the Government pays him only for the upper . . . Harry Hopkins seems to have aged five years since Christmas, and he has a strenuous year ahead of him . . . He's grayer, and gaunt; and Brewster with his millions had a piker's job beside Hopkins'.

* * * *

"—his shad was unboned"

Planked shad is quite a local delicacy in Washington, what with the Potomac and its shoals of shad nearby; and planked shad appears often on the menu at the House and Senate restaurants . . .

But while the shad served at de luxe Washington restaurants is boned, under the big dome the Senators must eat unboned shad . . . One Senator who raked his way through a big fish the other day threatens to introduce a bill requiring all Senatorial shad to be boned; he served notice on a waiter.

* * * *

The naughty word which got a young Englishman in dutch with Hitler's secret police was "bloody," which he had used in a half-finished letter the spies found in his room . . . So say the young diplomats here . . . As the English use it, the word doesn't mean bloody; it's just a cussword . . . But the Nazi Sherlocks thought it was a reflection on the almost bloodless putsch in Austria.

* * * *

For the moment it's unfashionable in the Capital to jeer at "the profit motive" . . . You musn't say anything more radical than that "laissez faire is dead," if you want to be stylish . . . "Laissez faire" merely means non-interference; that's what the Government's bright young men say is dead; they admit reluctantly that the profit motive still lives. They found that out.

Compromise Ends Juvenile Court Fight

Senate, House Agree to Social Welfare Aide as Investigator.

Report on Bill Awaits the Signatures of Absent Members.

By James D. Secrest.

A compromise in the Senate-House fight over the District Juvenile Court bill, which has been in conference since last August, virtually was agreed to yesterday, although the report was held up for the signatures of absentee conferees.

Representative Jack Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, suggested the compromise, and the Senate managers approved it with a slight change in language. Due to the absence of Representatives Palmisano (Democrat), of Maryland, and Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, however, the report could not be filed.

For nine months the House and Senate conferees have been at odds over a Senate amendment which restored the corporation counsel's office to the reorganized Juvenile Court. House managers agreed with original sponsors of the reform that the corporation counsel should be eliminated.

Compromise Proposed.

Nichols' compromise proposal is that an officer of the court, specifically a social welfare worker, shall make all investigations of complaints, as provided in the House bill, but that his findings and recommendation shall be subject to approval of the corporation counsel or a designated assistant.

Under the Senate amendment the corporation counsel would have complete control of the inquiry and would determine whether or not proceedings should be instituted.

The Nichols compromise also authorizes a complainant to appeal to the corporation counsel whenever the investigating social worker fails to find sufficient cause for filing a petition in the court.

The role of the corporation counsel was the only controversial issue remaining as conferees last week reached an agreement on other features of the bill.

One of the reasons for the prompt acceptance of the House proposal by the Senate, it is understood, was that Corporation Counsel Elwood H. Seal reversed his attitude in the matter.

Sided With Lawyers.

Last year Seal sided with Washington lawyers who appeared before the Senate District Committee and opposed the House "social welfare" provisions. During the conference, however, he said that he believed his office should not have any prosecuting role in the court, as the purpose of the bill is to change the tribunal into a chancery court as against a criminal court.

Among the other compromises reached by the conferees was that the House language should be restored with regard to jury trials for minors and that the Senate amendment relative to jury trials for adults should be retained.

The Senate had changed House language in both instances to specify that the defendants must expressly waive jury trials. As the bill now stands, adults must waive jury trials, whereas children, their parents or guardians, shall not be given a jury trial unless they demand it.

The juvenile court bill passed the House March 1, 1937, and the Senate August 14, the same year.

Sponsors of the measure insists that it will bring the District Court up to the standard of the modern children's chancery tribunal in which criminal procedure is discarded in favor of informal administration of the law by the judge.

Most of Accidents After Rest Period, Safe Drivers Told

The majority as well as the most serious traffic and highway accidents occur within two or three hours after the rest period, J. C. Wilson, vice president in charge of safety of the Lumbermens Insurance Co., declared last night at a dinner in honor of milk truck drivers with perfect driving records.

He told the drivers, employes of Thompson Dairy Co., of the benefits to both the trucker and the motorist of the stringent safety rules set up by the Motor Carrier Division of he Interstate Commerce division.

'Reinforced' Middle Class Is Demanded

Lippmann and Others Address Banquet at Sulgrave Club.

America's middle-class is the country's guarantee of future "freedom and opportunity," Walter Lippmann, newspaper columnist, told 200 Washington Harvard alumni gathered last night at the Sulgrave Club for their annual banquet.

Lippmann, who was graduated from Harvard in 1910, was one of three speakers. The others were Dr. John Stewart Bryan, president of William and Mary College, and Bruce Hopper, professor at Cambridge of international relations. Robert Lincoln O'Brien, former chairman of the Tariff Commission, was toastmaster.

Describing himself as an "unreconstructed Democrat," Lippmann entitled his speech, "The Need for More Sweetness and Light and How to Get Them."

"Must Be Strongest."

"If the system of freedom and opportunity is to survive," he stated, "the middle class must be the strongest element in society."

He defined it as including "many farmers and manual laborers" in addition to traditional white-collar employes and merchants. It must be "politically stronger than the proletariat and the plutocracy," he added.

Although admitting that political leaders "are perhaps disposed to forget that the American republic is a middle-class republic," the columnist added:

"I am quite confident of the future . . . No administration can last which does not listen to this group."

Hopper predicted central Asia soon would supplant Europe and America in economic ascendancy. Pointing to sectiotns of Siberia and central China as the future "citadels" of economic development, he said they were more favored than Europe in raw materials, immunity from "air-bomber politics" and manpower.

Ties Are Emphasized.

Ties between Harvard and William and Mary were stressed by Bryan. Pointing out that Sir George Yardley, an early Virginia Governor-General, was "a cousin of John Harvard's wife," he told his audience that "that's close kin in Virginia—the kind you cash in on."

Although admitting that two convicted English highway robbers once fell on their knees and "prayed for death when sentenced to be sent to Virginia," he asserted Virginia claimed a close interest in Harvard since the State's early boundaries were "the Atlantic, New Spain, New France and the unknown."

Senate Adopts Taxi Liability Insurance Bill

$5,000 for Personal Hurts, $1,000 for Property Damage Provided.

The Senate yesterday adopted the conference report on the District taxicab liability insurance bill upon motion of Senator Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland.

If the House approves the report early next week, it will be sent to the White House for the President's signature. Chairman Palmisano, of the House District Committee, had held up the report until the return of Representative Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, one of the conferees.

The bill requires all taxicab operators to file liability insurance policies with the Public Utilities Commission, insuring their patrons or anyone they may injure in a collision.

The measure stipulates that the insurance must be up to $5,000 for personal injuries, and $1,000 for property damage, with a limitation of $10,000 on all judgments arising from a single accident.

Taxicab operators and the commission expect the legislation to reduce the number of cabs operating on Washington streets. There are 5,000 licensed in the District.

Taxicab operators, moreover, have predicted that the jump in operating costs will force them to ask the Public Utilities Commission for an increase in fare of 5 cents to the zone.

International Law Group Meets Here

International law is powerless to prevent wars, but merely alters the methods of their settlement, Dr. Josef L. Kunz, of the University of Toledo, told the American Society of International Law, in session at the Carlton Hotel, last night.

"Theory could have predicted that even a compulsory court is not enough; for international, as well as internal, conflicts are not only conflicts on what law is, but also on what law should be. The necessity for change can not be eliminated from any system of law.

"It is to be foreseen that a system ignoring these dynamic conflicts, must lead, as in municipal law, to restlessness, revolutions, civil wars, to international restlessness, and the use of force."

Prof. Norman A. MacKenzie, of the University of Toronto, addressed the session.

Constitution Nature's Law, Sumners Says

People Must Speak Out or Lose Freedom, He Declares.

Declaring that the "Constitution and free government have come to us as the direct result of natural laws" Representative Hatton W. Sumners, chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, said last night, "Congress is the only group of persons in the country attempting to run a Government without first trying to determine the natural laws governing it."

"It is disgraceful to jazz alone and forget our heritage when we are facing a question of whether or not we are going to have a free government," Representative Sumners asserted.

Speaking before nearly 1,000 members of the Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite of Freemasonry, gathered at the Willard Hotel in celebration of the sesquicentennial of the Constitution, the speaker urged the audience to "fight for a Government that is worth fighting for.

"If the time ever comes when the people of the United States fail to voice their sentiment in our Government, there will be no free Government. It may be difficult to realize how fast and completely freedom is disappearing in this world but a nation can't win without the guidance of public opinion."

Also addressing the group, Dr. Cloyd Heck Marvin, president of George Washington University, declared "We need no change or substitute for the Constitution. If we have faith in ourselves as sons of God, we will be given the same incentive to carry on the fight for free government as the formers of the Constitution.

Among honored guests invited to the meeting which included a buffet supper and dancing were Jesse C. Adkins, Bruce Baird, Charles E. Baldwin, Reuben A. Bogley, John O. Bowen, William A. Cady, Carl H. Claudy, Charles Cyrus Coombs, H. G. Spaulding, Needham C. Turnage, Col. E. W. Starling and Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace.

Brother Wires His Support to New Movement

try of unemployment by wealth creating work undertaken through Government direction.

The Governor and his advisers withheld for the time being names of "important leaders" of other States said to have indorsed the movement.

No national personages except A. A. Berle, Assistant Secretary of State and Representative of Mayor La Guardia of New York, appeared at the meeting, but the Governor's brother, United States Senator Robert M. La Lollette, jr., sent a message of support from Washington.

The new party will crusade under an emblem with a dual meaning. The symbol is a circle containing a cross, superimposed on a huge blue flag. The cross, the Governor said, stands for the voter's ballot mark and for the multiplication of wealth.

The Wisconsin Governor, son of the late "Old Bob" La Follette who failed in a campaign for the Presidency on an independent ticket in 1924, told a mass meeting of liberals that the Democratic and Republican parties never can unite on a fundamental program to restore economic equilibrium and that the time had come for an entirely new movement to go forward.

The decision to create a new party, which he said had been joined by liberals the country over, was announced in these dramatic words:

"A beginning has been made, here and now, not in 1944, not in 1940, but now, in 1938.

"The National Progressives of America are now organized. State by State we shall build as rapidly as firm foundations can be laid. Definitely and irrevocably we are in the lists to stay until the American people recapture their heritage.

"Make no mistake, this is not a third party. As certain as the sun rises, we are launching THE party of our time."

From Washington, Senator La Follette telegraphed the meeting that there must be "genuine political realignment" in the United States.

He said the will of the people has been "frustrated by political parties which refuse to respond to the mandate of the voters."

[In a message to Alvin C. Reis, chairman of the conference, La Follette said he regretted that Senate debate on the naval expansion bill prevented him from attending.]

In a final break with the national Administration Gov. La Follette paid tribute to the "brilliant leadership" of President Roosevelt but declared that leadership alone, no matter how great, "cannot mix political oil and water."

He said that if the task of rehabilitation had been supported by popular confidence and affection for the leadership of Roosevelt, the job would have been done long ago under his Administration, but that party dissension had undermined and hamstrung the Administration.

La Follette did not disclose the identity of "important leaders" his secretaries previously had announced had joined the new party movement.

Mayor Fiorello H. La Guardia, of New York, has spoken sympathetically of the Governor's plans.

Vast Resources Cited.

The Governor declared there are vast resources to be put to use for the benefit of all classes and that the new trend in government must be one of expanding, rather than curtailing, production.

On the side of production he listed modernizing of the railroads and a "long overdue task" of improving housing conditions as two potential fields.

"These are only two of hundreds of examples of the great new frontier ahead of us," he said, "but just these two alone would put billions of idle capital to work and create millions of new wealth-creating jobs. They alone would end unemployment in America for years.

"This is the kind of work that makes real business for everyone—the mines, the railroads, the factories, the farms, the stores, the shops and the offices. It is the kind of business too, that does not have to be run from Washington.

"A program of constructive action is not difficult to think of or agree upon. Our great difficulty is getting a government that sees the problem and has the courage to act.

"I emphasize, a government that will act, because if anything is clear, this is clear, that the question of prosperity or hard times—of liberty or dictatorship—will be made by government.

"Near End of Road."

"We are now at a crossroad," the Governor added. "We caonot turn to capitalism or to socialism, we canot turn to fascism or to communism. We are near the end of a road. The time has come when a new trail must be blazed—a trial that will take the fundamental teachings of the past and apply them to the modern world as we know it."

The Governor declared the real division in America today is not between Republicans and Democrats, workers and farmers, capital and labor. It is between the earners on one side and collectors on the other."

La Follette emphasized that the new party is neither a "popular front" nor a "conglomeration of opposing forces huddled together for temporary expediency."

"We do not seek, indeed we shall not accept, individuals or groups who seek us out because they are embittered or disgruntled," he asserted. "We seek only those who come with complete conviction, and without reservation. The movement that unites America must be itself united."

La Follette announced the five principles to which the new party will giveallegiance as stated in its articles of association. They are:

"The ownership and control of money and credit, without qualification or reservation, must be under public and not private control.

"The organized power of this Nation must stop at nothing short of necessary steps to restore to every American the absolute right to earn his living by the sweat of his brow.

"We believe in the basic concepts of American Government and, in particular, that grants of power always should be safeguarded against abuse. Our present governmental system is in sad need of modernizing. One important step is to grant the executive branch power to get things done—to get to work on the problems of agriculture, business and industry. But, as we have demonstrated in Wisconsin, this can be done with ample guarantees against arbitrary or dictatorial abuse of such power.

"Those who work on the farm and in the city must be given security, not a security founded on producing less for more, or working less for more. We propore security founded on a definite decent annual income for all, measured by our contribution both in quality and quantity.

"We flatly oppose every form of coddling, or spoon-feeding the American people—whether it be those on relief—whether it be farmers or workers—whether it be business or industry. No government on earth can successfully manage, regulate industry and direct the numerous details that make for healthy families or successful business.

Frontiers of Today.

"Like our forefathers, we will use every power of government to open the frontier of this age. We will build stockades and forts to protect industrious producers from raiding squads—we will use its might to cut through the modern underbrush of worn-out debts. We will use without hesitation its authority to suppress the modern counterpart of the savages, those stupid people who deny others access to materials that they themselves do not know how rightly to use. Whatever it may cost—so help us God—we shall use the power of these United States to restore to every American the opportunity to help himself. After that, we can sink or swim.

"We believe that this hemisphere—all of it—was set aside by our Creator for the ultimate destiny of man. Here, a vast continent was kept virgin for centuries. Here it was ordained that man should work out the final act in the great drama of life. From the Arctic to Cape Horn let no foreign power trespass. Our hemisphere was divinely destined to evolve peace, security and plenty. It shall remain inviolate for that sacred purpose.

"During the four years of the Hoover Administration," La Follette said, "we waited for prosperity which was just around the corner. As we waited we failed to produce for our normal capacity. We lived from our accumulated fat. At the end of three years of waiting, private business was nearly bankrupt. The books of our banks, insurance companies, railroads and thousands of individuals and corporations were 'in the red.'

"During the six years of the Roosevelt Administration we transferred red ink from the books of private enterprise to the bookkeeping of our local, State and National Government.

"This well meant but futile experiment has been expensive. Through private and public borrowing we have sought to maintain the American standard of living without producing enough real wealth to support it. We approach the point where we cannot much longer borrow for that sort of enterprise.

"The day of reckoning may not come this year or next, but the old, inescapable truth stands before us. The American standard of living today is supported by an enormous mass of outworn public and private debt."

Sees Political Ring.

La Follette maintained that Progressive leaders in the Democratic Party are only an outer fringe acting as "window dressing" and that the real power increasingly is wielded" by a "group of politicians who see no more and who feel no more than the Old Guard of the Republican Party."

The Roosevelt Administration, he continued, has had to go in many different and inconsistent directions at the same time because the politicians insist upon "keeping all possible political power and patronage."

"It is tragic but true," he said, "that the Roosevelt Administration has had to dissipate gifts of leadership in a course so confused and so confusing that no one should know just where it led, because—let this be emphasized—had the course been clear and fundamental, the Democratic Party as such would not follow. Even such attempts to move forward as the Administration has made have torn the Democratic Party apart. Is it any wonder then that a course so charted should return us to our starting point?"

He mixed humor with serious political discussion, several times departing from his prepared text to get laughs from the audiences.

Two of his interpolations

"Capitalism has no emotion. It doesn't even read the newspapers."

"The Republican Party had a fitting symbol in 1936. Remember? A covered wagon and an oxcart tying up traffic on Michigan avenue (Chicago)."

The Governor's ringing declarations launching the new political party climaxed a week of speculation following a series of four radio speeches last week in which La Follette reviewed the accomplishments of his own administration and took sharp difference with the plans of the President to bring a return of better times.

A little more than two hours before the Governor began to speak, the Nation was given a preview of what he had in mind with the disclosure of the new party plan by the Chief Executive's secretarial staff The spokesman was A. W. Zeratsky, chief secretary.

For a year, Zeratsky said, "important leaders and rank and file" sympathizers have been holding a series of meetings in nearly all states. As a result of these meetings, the decision was made to launch the new political party.

La Follette—"Phil" alike to his friends and political foes—will be the principal officer of the new organization for the time being, and immediately will begin the work of organization.

The Governor has been silent concerning his own plans for holding office, but the disclosure by Zeratsky was interpreted to mean that "Phil" would not seek a fourth term as Governor, and would leave his time free to stump the country in behalf of the new party.

La Follette often has said that he learned from his father, the late Senator Robert M. La Follette, sr., that any new movement must be based on a firm foundation in every State. Apparently in keeping with this political thesis, Zeratsky said the organization work would proceed on a State-to-State basis, with the first objective the placing of candidates in the field for Congress seats.

Zeratsky would not identify the "important leaders" as newspapermen called off names of possible adherents to the new cause. Zeratsky declined to give any definite answer.

Asked if Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia of New York is one of the group, Zeratsky replied that he "understood the New York mayor has endorsed La Follette's proposals."

Pleas to support the President's recovery program and for progressives to "unite for victory in the 1938 election" came to the Governor today as the liberals began arriving for tonight's meeting.

"Our organization is standing solidly behind the Roosevelt recovery program and we look with confidence to your conference for similar support," the Wisconsin C. I. O. telegraphed the governor over the signature of Gunnar Mickelsen, State director.

La Follette issued the call for tonight's meeting in climaxing last week four radio speeches featured by sharp criticism of the Administration's depression-routing plans.

From Washington, Representative O'Connell (Democrat), of Montana, telegraphed:

"Now is the time when progressives need to unite for the passage of recovery and wage-and-hour legislation, and for victory in the 1938 elections."

Senator La Follette's telegram said, "It is clear that if democracy is to survive and our free institutions are to be preserved in this crisis there must be a genuine political realignment in this country."

He added that "in three national elections the overwhelming majority of the people have registered their will only to have it frustrated by political parties which refuse to respond to the mandate of the voters.

La Follette recalled principles set out by the Progressive Party in its first campaign, including the right of collective bargaining, the right of citizens "to face their declining years free from the fear of want" and the right of individuals to receive for their work "an income which the full productive capacity of society can afford."

All these features will be found in some General Electric cabinets and some in all models: ✓ Fast-freezing, instant release Quick Trays ✓ Stainless Steel Super-Freezer ✓ Temperature Control and Defrosting Switch ✓ Thermometer ✓ Automatic Light ✓ Sliding Shelves ✓ Vegetable Drawer ✓ Chiller Tray ✓ Matched Food Containers ✓ Water Bottle.

PRICE

Reduced 50%!

The G-E Refrigerators purchased 12 years ago—when G-E introduced the sealed-in-steel cold-making Monitor Mechanism—have long since proved excellent investments. And since then General Electric values have gone up and prices down—average prices on all G-E models have been reduced approximately 50%.

OPERATING COST

Reduced 60%!

Hermetically sealed within walls of steel, the famed G-E Monitor Mechanism revolutionized refrigeration costs when introduced 12 years ago. Since then, basically unchanged and constantly improved, the G-E Thrift Unit has cut current costs 60% (figured on popular 6 cu. ft. size)! OIL COOLING developed by G-E "House of Magic," gives more cold with less current and assures longer life.

COLD CAPACITY

Increased 56%!

More cold producing capacity with less current consumption has resulted from G-E's research and engineering. Since the first General Electric Refrigerator with the sealed Monitor Mechanism was sold, the cold producing capacity of the General Electric has been increased 56%. You can be sure of plenty of ice cubes during even the most torrid heat wave.

FAST FREEZING

3 Times as Fast!

The freezing speed of the G-E has been stepped up until today, it freezes over 3 times as fast as originally. In G-E models with 6 trays, 480 cubes can be frozen in 24 hours. And the average current cost is less than the price of ice. New G-E Quick Trays release 2 cubes or a trayful at a time without melting.

QUIET

Operating Sound Reduced 78%!

You can scarcely hear the slight purr of today's G-E cold-making Monitor Mechanism. The first G-E set a new standard of quietness, and since then the operating whisper has been reduced 78%—a result of such features as acoustic mufflers, "floating power," and forced-feed lubrication.

Advertising, It Is Unanimous, Has No Place Upon the Screen

Publishers and One Producing Company Are in Accord on a Vital Topic; Better Work at National; Notes and Gossip of the Theater.

THIS being the season of conventions of newspaper publishers and editors, as well as of film sales forces, it is interesting to note at least one point of agreement between these two media of universal appeal to the masses on a matter of supreme importance to them both.

BELL.

Recently the general manager of a considerable chain of newspapers, in an address to some 500 publishers, made the assertion that the greatest menace to the advertising columns of the press was the increasing amount of blatant advertising material that was allowed to creep upon the screen. He was largely right. And the complaint should come not only from the representatives of the press, but from the general public as well. Amusement-seekers pay their admission tolls with the expectation of being entertained and not "sold" on the merits of various commercial products.

There is at least one producing company of major importance that fully grasps this fact and has paced its policy to it. Hence the following statement from Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, inspired, no doubt, by the objection of the newspaper executive:

"In the past we have been opposed to commercial advertising on our screen—Ed. Note: This would be Loew's, Inc., speaking, rather than M.-G.-M.—and have not accepted it. That is still our policy."

There are those among the producers and exhibitors, however, who still endeavor to slip over the vagrant "plug" to the great discomfiture of those who have paid the tariff for an afternoon or evening of amusement.

Needless to say, this column is all on the side of the newspaper publisher who voiced the protest—and on the side of M.-G.-M. and Loew, who individually accorded it a finely emphatic sort of approbation.

The Warner Brothers' Calvert Theater, at Wisconsin avenue and Calvert street northwest, will celebrate its first anniversary during the week beginning next Sunday, May 1, if I have my glasses on straight. Manager Alan Bachrach announces that Art Brown, famous for his "Musical Clock" and other programs over a popular radio station, will appear in person at the console of a Hammond electric organ at the Calvert three times daily during anniversary week. Special screen entertainment also has been booked for this first birthday celebration.

• • • •

President Roosevelt unwittingly wrote the title of the fifth "living newspaper," which was originally produced by the Federal Theater in New York and will be presented by the Washington Civic Theater as the last play of its season.

The piece originally was called "Housing," but when the President said in one of his messages, "I see one-third of a Nation ill-housed, ill-clad and ill-nourished," the phrase caught the fancy of the living newspaper editors and their latest work immediately became "One-Third of a Nation."

The Civic Theater's production will open in the Wardman Park Theater in May.

• • • •

Perhaps it would be well to take back much that has been said here about the speed with which "Yes, My Darling Daughter" was played at the National during the early days of the week. It has been reported to me, since, that Wednesday night's performance was practically perfect and that Lucile Watson in the role of the mother was the best thing in it. This is as it should have been from the outset and I hope it is true.

• • • •

It is not often that the opposition, so-called, points with pride to the screen production of another company. Yet, the other night, I sat around in a long confab—much too long, by the clock, as a matter of fact—with Eddie McEvoy, eastern division manager for RKO-Radio Pictures, and heard him say that he deems "Test Pilot," opening on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater today, probably the best picture that has been produced in America in the last ten years.

Of course, the fact that his son had a finger, or a pencil, or something, in the preparation of the script may have had something to do with his estimate, but I still think he is right.

"Test Pilot" is a great picture and will knock you right off your chair—if you can get one—when you see it.

• • • •

"Il Trionfo Dell Amore," which roughly translated might be "The Triumph of Love," a motion picture based on the popular Italian comedy by Gherardo Gherardi, will be shown at the Rialto Theater on Sunday at 7 and 9 p. m. It would be possible to recite a long list of prominent Italian actors and actresses who appear in the pivotal roles of this subject, but since you would not know any of them by name and only a few by reputation, what would be the use?

• • • •

The Cross Roads Theater, at Bailey's Cross Roads, Va., announces "Petticoat Fever" as its first production of the new summer season. This is the more or less gay treatise upon the rigors of the Arctic dashed off a few seasons ago by Mark Reed, who happens, also, to be the author of "Yes, My Darling Daughter," currently holding the boards at the National Theater.

The play is under the direction of C. Adolph Glassgold, assisted by Dorothy O'Donnell, daughter of that doughty restaurateur, Tom, whose citadel of the crustaceans never closes. Production dates will be announced in the near future.

• • • •

On Saturday, at 3 p. m., and again on Monday, at 8 p. m., the Children's Studio of Drama, under the direction of Rose Robison Cohen, will present Sir James Matthew Barrie's immortal play of "Peter Pan." The performances will be for the benefit of the Langdon School for Crippled Children. Although a lengthy announcement of this worthy undertaking comes to me from Mrs. Cohen, we find it impossible to state where the performances are to be given, because the story doesn't say! But they are to be given, make no mistake about that.

Pidgeon Meets Pal After 22 Years

Walter Pidgeon insists he has Hollywood's poorest memory for names, yet he met a former war buddy on Hollywood boulevard and recognized him instantly after 22 years.

"I had just come out of a restaurant," said Pidgeon, while awaiting his cue for a scene in "Shopworn Angel," "when a man walked up to me and grasped my hand.

"'Walter Pidgeon!' he exclaimed. 'You don't recognize me, do you?'"

"I recognized him at once as Freddie Farrar, now a lawyer. He was in my outfit in the World War. How I remembered him I can't explain. I have the poorest memory for names and faces in Hollywood."

Bergen's Offer Is Turned Down

Joe McDonough, assistant director on John M. Stahl's "Letter of Introduction" called Edgar Bergen for work in a scene yesterday.

"You're wanted on the set," he told Bergen. "Mr. Stahl wants Charlie's off-stage voice."

"Must I leave my dressing room?" Bergen asked.

"Certainly," answered McDonough. "How're we going to get Charlie's off-stage voice unless you come on the set?"

"I'll throw it from here," Bergen answered.

But that wouldn't do. So Bergen had to go to the set.

"What's the use of being a ventriloquist?" he complained.

Buy Story.

"Ol' Man River," story by Oscar Hammerstein 2d and H. S. Craft, has been purchased by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer for screen production. The story is a saga of pioneer days on the Mississippi culminating in the modern fight for flood control. The period is 1870.

Mustache Can Make or Break Any Mere Male

Hollywood Correspondent Gets Expertly Trimmed and Explains Why.

By Frederick C. Othman.

Hollywood, April 28 (U.P.)—Madam, if your husband is a funny-looking gent whose face looks like a platter with a whisk-broom on it, grieve no more. The trouble lurks in his mustache and the remedy is easy.

All you've got to do is play Delilah, carefully following the directions of Jack Dawn, the greatest mustache expert of them all.

Dawn, the veteran director of make-up at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, is responsible for the superb mustache of Clark Gable, the upper-lip glory of Lewis Stone, and the hirsute adornment of many another star—and he knows what he's talking about when he says that the average mustache owner looks like a bear-skin coat that's begun to shed.

"Very few men wearing mustaches on the streets today," he said, "know how to wear a mustache properly. They just grow some hair on their lips and let it go at that, even though they look like plucked porcupines."

Quarter-Moon Mustachios.

He called Gable's mustachios the perfect creation of their kind. He likened them to two quarter moons, separated beneath the nose and sweeping toward the corner of the mouth. They're good only for Gable, though, and not for gents whose faces differ in the slightest from his.

As a general rule, Dawn said, a man with a long nose should wear a mustache which covers only the lower half of his lip. If he's got a short nose, then he should cultivate the whole lip, as luxuriantly as nature will allow.

"A mustache worn high above the lip on a face with a long nose makes the nose appear longer," he added. "On the other hand, the man with a broad upper lip and a normal nose should wear his mustache higher than the average man to give better lines to his mouth.

"For a mouth that turns downward at the corners, the mustache should be trimmed upward at the ends. This gives the illusion of the straighter mouth.

"Mustaches thus can correct badly sloping mouths. They make thick lips appear thinner and they can give ugly mouths the appearance of good lines."

New One for Gravet.

Dawn interrupted the proceedings to manufacture a new mustache for Fernand Gravet, the French actor, who is going into a movie depicting the life of Johann Straus. Then Dawn phoned Gable to tell him not to clip his mustache for the next few weeks.

Gable, it develops, is about to appear as a movie cameraman in "Too Hot to Handle," and so must have a thicker mustache than usual. The idea is that a cameraman is so busy hopping from one disaster to another that he has no time to keep his mustache trimmed.

These details cared for, Dawn turned to us and said our mustache was one of the worst he ever had seen.

"It is a horrible mustache," he said. "It's a wonder your wife does not leave you. It's the kind of mustache that's a disgrace to American manhood. If you'll allow me——"

Reporter Done Over.

His scissors went swickety-snickety-snick in his hand. We could see that he was itching to make our map more of a pleasure and less of a pain to everybody concerned, so we climbed into his barber chair, shut our eyes and hoped for the best.

Results were surprising. They were almost superb. A quarter of an inch chopped off the top of our mustache, the ends whittled down and the bottom evened up, and we hardly knew ourself. We didn't look like Gable, exactly, but we surely did look fine. So we went home, expecting a compliment, which was not long in forthcoming.

"Hmmm," said Mrs. O., looking over Dawn's art with a critic's eye, "you need a haircut. And tell the barber to leave your mustache alone. It looks like an actor's."

Movie Queens Confess Hunt For Sweeties

They all want boy friends—the kind you like to take home and introduce to father.

Speaking now of a bevy of glamorous movie queens, admired by many and envied of all—Margot Grahame, Olympe (O-lamp) Bradna, Rochelle Hudson, Ginger Rogers, Katharine Hepburn, Martha Raye, Florence George, Eleanore Whitney, Olivia de Havilland, Madge Evans, Anita Louise, Mary Carlisle and, yes, even Mae West.

They all want boy friends! Not that these luscious luminaries have to sit home by the fire. They have plenty of admirers, plenty of escorts. But they're still single, looking for that ideal man.

Even the classically irresistible Mae West currently is unencumbered. "The chamber of commerce tells me that there are three women for every man in Hollywood—but where's my third?" Mae bleats.

Many of the most dazzling of the screen queens are sitting home evenings waiting for a call and freely admit that they have no romance in their lives. And these are not only the traditional recluses like Katharine Hepburn and Greta Garbo, but the glamorous Ginger, who has had no new boy friend since James Stewart stepped in and out of her life, the petite Olympe now busy in "Stolen Heaven," Hollywood's kissless screen star; Olivia de Havilland, whose name has never been coupled with anyone's; Martha Raye, who is unattached; Eleanore Whitney, who has canceled her engagement to Johnny Downs; Rochelle Hudson, who has been "between romances" for a long time, and Mary Carlisle, who says her friendship with James Blakeley is "less than casual."

The Post's New Yorker

By LEONARD LYONS

New York, April 28.

ENTERPRISE: Louis Ritter, the New York furrier, went to Washington to deliver a coat purchased by Mrs. Roosevelt . . . At the White House gates the guards stopped him and asked: "What's in that package?" . . . "Don't worry, don't worry," the furrier replied. "You want to know what's in that package? Only one thing could be in that package—bombs!" . . . The guards didn't worry at all. They merely hustled Mrs. Roosevelt's furrier to a room where, before releasing him, they searched his person thoroughly, as well as every inch of Mrs. Roosevelt's new coat.

* * * *

ESCAPE: Putzi Hanfstaengl, who once was Hitler's associate and who now is a refugee from Germany, decided Monday night that he was bored with being confined to his hotel room and decided to seek some entertainment . . . Putzi therefore purchased tickets to a Broadway show to relieve his mind from the problems which beset him . . . The show he carelessly selected was "Escape This Night." He discovered, too late, that it concerns the murder of a man who is a refugee from a country ruled by a dictator.

* * * *

TRIUMPH: For the past few months Ruth Rubenstein, a garment worker and member of the International Garment Workers Union, has been appearing in "Pins and Needles," where she features a song called "I Used to Be in the Vassar Daisy Chain" . . . On May 21 Miss Rubenstein will accompany Mildred Bailey and Red Norvo to Poughkeepsie. She'll sing that proletarian blues song at the Vassar prom.

* * * *

DEFEAT: Robert E. Sherwood, author of "Idiot's Delight," is the tallest playwright in America. Sherwood, who is almost 6 feet 7, tendered a party at his home Monday evening and invited, among the guests over whom he'd tower, John Ringling North, head of the Ringling circus . . . "I hope you don't mind my bringing a friend along," North told the playwright. "I just want to prove that you're not the tallest man in show business" . . . North then ushered in Mr. Jack Earle, of the Ringling circus—who is 8 feet 4.

* * * *

CRIME: Gurrah Shapiro, who surrendered to District Attorney Dewey last week, appeared before Justice Pecora on Monday to plead to indictments for racketeering in the garment industry . . . As a matter of fact, there are two indictments, 40 pages long, and Gurrah is not the only defendant named therein. The other defendants—one of them, Lepke Buchalter, have not been apprehended as yet.

* * * *

TRUTH: One of the new features of the Casa Manana will be a lie-dectector machine similar to those used in courtrooms recently. The machine will be available for use by any patron intent upon testing truths . . . A pendulum in the machine swings to and fro, as an indication that the truth isn't being told. Before installing this instrument, Billy Rose made his own test. "Are you a modest man?" he was asked . . . The producer answered "Yes," and when the pendulum's swing almost broke the machine, Rose signed the contract forthwith.

* * * *

CHATTER: The Constitutional Convention delegates are rebelling against the borough leaders who have sent letters of instruction regarding the appointment of the $10-a-day clerks. As a protest, few of these appointments are being made . . . Bert Wheeler will join Walter Futter, who is going to England to settle Paramount's quota trouble, by arranging for the production of movies in that country . . . Jack Dowling, son of Producer Eddie Dowling, has completed his first novel, "Now a Slight Rain Is Falling" . . . Al Smith will be invested as a papal chamberlain at the Waldorf, May 16 . . . The I. W. O. Aviation Club will participate in the May Day parade, by having 10 planes "parade" in the air.

* * * *

ACHIEVEMENT: Scott, who manufactures the custom-built Scott radios, has perfected a new device which gets radio programs in such a way that the listener hears only music—eliminating all advertising blurbs . . . "That's a great invention," Scott was assured last week. "Why don't you publicize it?" . . . "Well, I don't mind inventing a gadget to put the advertisers' blurbs out of business," he explained, "but I don't want to give the advertiser any more misery by boasting about it."

* * * *

FEALTY: Harry Kurnitz, whose book, "Fast Company," won the $1,000 Dodd-Mead prize, has been in Hollywood these past months, working for M.-G.-M. . . . A number of agents set upon him when he first arrived and tried to sign him. Kurnitz immediately took steps to inform them that he already has an agent for the full year. That's why, at all the conferences, the writer wore a sweat shirt whose back bore the strange inscription "Myron Selznick—1938."

* * * *

STRENGTH: An unusual scene was presented in an East Side night club last Wednesday . . . Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr., submitted to a punch on his arm from a young publisher as a test of strength. The publisher then submitted his own right arm to receive Roosevelt's punch in return . . . The publisher who traded these punches with young Roosevelt was William Randolph Hearst, jr.

McCarthy Keeps Studio in a Riot

Charlie McCarthy's unexpected utterances and wisecracks are becoming the talk of Hollywood.

Every player and extra who has worked on "Letter of Introduction" which stars Bergen and McCarthy, Adolphe Menjou, Andrea Leeds and George Murphy, comes away from the stages with a fund of anecdotes regarding Bergen's brazen blockhead.

Latest to go the rounds is Charlie's comeback to John M. Stahl recently. Stahl, directing the pair, noticed Bergen laughing at some piece of business which Charlie had just completed.

"What are you laughing at, Edgar?" Stahl inquired.

"He's laughing at me," Charlie retorted. "I'm clever, ain't I, Bergen?"

Corruption.

A political fight that turns a small town upside down furnishes the climax of "This Marriage Business." Victor Moore stars in the role of an elderly marriage license clerk.

In Hollywood

HEDDA HOPPER

Hollywood, Calif., April 28.—"Doctor Rhythm" is one of Bing Crosby's grandest pictures. You might call it—in fact, I will—a slapstick, refeened comedy.

I know of no one, except Bee Lillie, who could make a two-syllable word out of rhythm. Thank goodness they've at last found a fitting frame for her talents. She's not good — she's great. But the audience agreed. A spontaneous burst of applause followed every peak. And she had peaks, peaks, peaks. One she shared with Franklyn Pangborn, who's been making us laugh for years, but we don't shout much about it.

Bing actually makes you believe he is in love with the wench, played well by Mary Carlisle.

Andy Devine and Laura Hope Crews, both weighty, make their comedy parts pay dividends.

I'm sure "Doctor Rhythm" would put a dyspeptic on his feet.

When Arleen Whelan went to call on her former employer, the head of a beauty shop, he said, "I didn't renew your license this year—you won't need it." She replied: "Oh, but I want it renewed. You never know in this movie business." With that she handed him $1 for the license.

Carlyle Blackwell, former screen matinee idol, more distinguished looking now than then, is making tests for a new career. He was for a time the husband of a very rich English woman, married again, did a stretch of gentleman farming in Connecticut and is now free. And Hollywood looks very attractive to him.

I'll be disappointed if Rosalind Russell, now on her way to do "The Citadel" in England, doesn't return from there with a husband. She's the type our British cousins adore. And wouldn't she put style, dash and go into the House of Parliament, where Lady Astor has had her way for too many years.

Jack Barrymore is sporting three new cars. Lucky, eh? One each for himself, wife and mother-in-law. Wonder if the last-named has joined the gay mother-in-law club that's caught so many a woman's fancy? Nice work—and she got it.

When Walter Wanger goes house hunting, Joan Bennett goes along. The following day, Mrs. Wanger, who's just been freed by a divorce court, looks at the house to see if her former husband will be comfortable. Habits are hard to break. So far three houses have been thumbed down by her.

Joan Bennett has been absent from "The Texans" set two days. Complete loss of voice. The clouds of Fuller's Earth finally found a resting place.

You won't believe it, but W. C. Fields is wearing a bandage over his nose. Got an infection from a bee bite. I can hear Charlie McCarthy say, "That bee must have been blind—fancy stopping there, even for a bite."

Walter Huston gets my vote for the Dudley Digges part in the picture version of "On Borrowed Time." Walter didn't finished his last picture in time to do it on the stage.

Frances Goldwyn, one of our better-dressed wives, had to go to London to get a fashion writeup. I yelled when she said, in an interview there, that in her 13 years of wedded bliss with Sam, she had never heard one of those Goldwynisms. Sam must have been furious.

In the same paper, Sandra Storm, who got oodles of publicity when she posed for six artists in "Artists and Models," said she's now cast in a London picture called "A Spot of Bother." She gave out that she left Hollywood because it was a terrifying place. She longed for old faces

Predict Success For Miss Hansen

Hollywood prophets who have watched Eleanor Hansen, pretty radio singer doing her first important film role opposite John Mack Brown in "Flaming Frontiers," predict for her one of the most promising careers of any young screen discovery.

Although Eleanor was a drama school student in Indianapolis, her home town, less than 18 months ago, her versatile performance in her first screen assignment has won the praise of Universal studio executives.

Josie Sedgwick, serial queen of silent days, visited Miss Hansen on the set this week, and watched her work in several scenes.

U.S. Conciliator Is Evicted From Crisfield Hotel

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Crisfield, Md., April 28.—A Federal labor conciliator, who came here to attempt a settlement in a five-week strike of crab pickers, was ordered to move from his room by a hotel proprietor today, and an unidentified C. I. O. organizer was driven out of town by a group of 100 men.

Meantime Gov. Harry W. Nice sent State police officials to this seafood center to "survey the situation."

Stanley White, Department of Labor conciliator, was ordered to move from the Somerset Hotel by James Byrd, the proprietor, because he was a "nuisance." Previously White had been seized by between 150 and 200 men, who mistook him fo Michael Howard, organizer for C. I. O. United Cannery, Agricultural, Packing and Allied Workers.

Calls Him "Nuisance."

"I ordered him (White) out because back of him there was possible trouble," said Byrd. "For three days he has been riding around town with Mitchel Howard and has been a bigger nuisance than Howard. He has even started more trouble."

The unidentified C. I. O. organizer who was driven out of town was stopped in front of the Boycraft, Inc., factory, where 200 shirtmakers are employed. He was taken outside the city limits and warned not to try to organize these workers.

"We don't want to hurt you, but you got to get out of town," said the leader of the escort party.

The departing union man stood up in his automobile and replied:

"I am a C. I. O. organizer and I don't want to get hurt, but I'm coming back."

Earlier today White and Howard had conferred with packers in the Somerset Hotel in an effort to settle the strike of the 300 crab pickers, most of them colored. The strike began five weeks ago when the packers posted notices of a wage cut from 7 to 5 cents a pound of picked crabs. The crab pickers were not organized.

Shortly thereafter Howard arrived, followed by White.

Last Thursday Howard's automobile was seized outside of union headquarters and burned. Leif Dahl, another C. I. O. organizer, said in Salisbury the next day that he had been "forced out of town."

Sheriff William H. Dryden and his two deputies were in court at Princess Anne that night.

Gov. Nice has ordered Maj. Elmer P. Munshower, commander of the State police, and Lieut. Ruxton Ridgely to come here and "report the true facts." He also has ordered A. Stengle Marine, commissioner of labor, to come here and seek an "amicable settlement of the strike."

Cowboy Tune.

"Silver on the Sage," a new cowboy lament written by Ralph Rainger and Leo Robin for "The Texans," is hummed by Joan Bennett, who heads the cast opposite Randolph Scott; sung by Bill Roberts, young contract player who came to the movies by the night club route.

Chess Pies Recipe Wins Post Contest

Black Walnut Icebox Cookies Capture Second Honors.

LITTLE CHESS PIES made from an old Tennessee recipe won the first prize in last week's contest for "salable dishes." The recipe meets requirements that are needed for this type of dish. They have a delicious flavor, can be made in great quantities, can be kept for several days without the texture or flavor being spoiled, and are not expensive to make.

The recipe was submitted by Mrs. Kelly Tatum, 1915 Sixteenth street northwest. Mrs. Tatum, who is a singer, finds cooking a pleasant hobby. These little chess pies were baked by her black Tennessee mammy for picnic luncheons under the large oak trees. They were especially enjoyed because they could be eaten with fingers. She now serves them at bridge parties. Mrs. Tatum says they are the easiest things in the world to make and would be perfect for church bazaar, fairs, or food sales.

Southern Chess Pie.

3 cups of sugar
1 cup of butter
1 cup of butter
Yolk of 8 eggs
2 tablespoons of corn meal
1-3 cup of water.

Place the sugar and butter and water in a saucepan and cook five minutes. Set aside to cool, moisten the corn meal, and mix with the well-beaten egg yolks. Then mix with sugar and butter which has cooled. Pour into favorite pastry shells. This amount makes 15 or 20 little individual chess pies or two large ones. Bake in moderate oven for 40 minutes.

Favorite Pastry.

3 cups of flour
1 teaspoon of salt
⅛ teaspoon of baking powder
⅛ teaspoon of sugar
½ teaspoon of vinegar
6 tablespoons of ice water
11 tablespoons of shortening

Mix all dry ingredients. Cut the shortening into the flour. Pour the vinegar into the ice water and mix by cutting into the flour. This pastry keeps several days.

Black Walnut Icebox Cookies.

4 cups of brown sugar
1 cup of lard
4 eggs
7 cups of flour
1 tablespoon of soda
1 tablespoon of cream of tartar
1 teaspoon of salt
1 cup of black walnut meats and raisins
1 tablespoon of vanilla

Cream the lard and sugar together. Beat in the eggs one at a time. Sift the soda, cream of tartar, and salt with the flour. Mix the nuts and fruit with the flour mixture. Add the vanilla and mix all together, working it with the hands until the dough is smooth. Form into two rolls, wrap in waxed paper, and kee it in the refrigerator or other cool place for several hours, or over night. Slice and bake as needed. Any kind of nuts may be used but the black walnut and brown sugar is a delicious blend. This makes six (6) dozen cookies.

CHOCOLATE devil's food cake is always a best seller at the food sale or church bazaar. This recipe has a good texture and color. The buttermilk and soda combination give the color a ruddy hue. The recipe was submitted by Mrs. M. E. Snyder, 907 Quackenbos street northwest.

Devil's Food.

½ cup of shortening (part butter)
1½ cups of sugar
2 squares of melted chocolate
2 eggs
½ teaspoon of salt
2 cups of cake flour, sifted
1 cup buttermilk
1 teaspoon of soda
1 teaspoon of vanilla

Cream the shortening until light and fluffy. Add the sugar gradually, mixing well. Add melted chocolate. Put in the unbeaten eggs one at a time, beating thoroughly after each addition. Add the buttermilk and flour alternately beginning with the flour. Add vanilla. Mix the soda with one teaspoon of boiling water. Add and mix well with the cake. Bake 25 or 30 minutes in a moderate oven. This makes three large layers.

A CASSEROLE that has a delicious flavor is needed for a salable dish. This recipe for macaroni has a snippy creole sauce added to lend a savory taste. The recipe wins a cash prize of $1 for Mary E. Weaver.

Casserole Supreme.

1 box of macaroni
1 green pepper
2 medium onions
1 small bunch of celery
½ pound of stewing meat or left-over roast
1 small can of tomato sauce
¼ teaspoon of Worcestershire sauce
¼ teaspoon of salt
Dash of pepper
Lump of butter, size of a walnut
½ pound of cheese

Cook the macaroni for 15 minutes in a slightly salted boiling water. Drain. Cook the diced pepper, onions, celery and meat in a saucepan or skillet for one-half hour or until the meat is tender. Keep covered with water or stock so that when done there will be some gravy. Remove from the fire, add the tomato sauce, Worcestershire sauce, salt and pepper.

Put one-half of the macaroni in a heated casserole which has had the butter melted in it. Add the meat mixture, one-half of the cheese, the remainder of the macaroni, and over all the last of the cheese. This serves six. Bake in a moderate over for 45 minutes.

Chocolate Mint Pie.

1 baked pie shell
1 cup of sugar
2 squares of chocolate
½ cup of boiling water
1 pint of milk
Vanilla
4 tablespoons cornstarch
½ pint whipped cream
4 tablespoons of cornstarch
½ pint of whipped cream
4 tablespoons of powdered sugar
½ teaspoon of peppermint extract

Melt the sugar and chocolate by pouring boiling water over them. Add all but a little of the milk and cook in a double boiler. When the mixture is hot, add the cornstarch, mixed with the remainder of the milk. Stir constantly until thick and smooth. Cook 15 minuttes, stirring occasionaly. Remove from fire, add vanilla, cool, stirring constantly. Pour into a baked pie shell. Cover with whipped cream mixture and garnish top with sweet chocolate.

Recipe Contest Winner and Her Prize Dish

LITTLE chess pies (upper) are arranged for informal party service. These old-fashioned delicacies won the first prize in last week's recipe contest. READERS' FOOD FORUM

Interesting Menus for 30-Minute Meal Are Given.

WHAT MENU do you select when you have only 30 minutes in which to prepare dinner? This is the question chosen this week to register an opinion among Washington housewives.

Strawberry Shortcake.

Mrs. J. R. Allgyer, 709 Elm street, Chevy Chase, Md:

"My menu for a 30-minute dinner consists of a casserole of noodles and tuna fish, a spring salad and strawberry shortcake. I have served this so many times that I know it can be done. Here is my plan of action. The noodles take only 9 minutes to cook. While these are on the stove, I grease the casserole and prepare the cream sauce. When the noodles are cooked, I place a layer of these in the casserole, a layer of tuna fish on top with buttered crumbs and bake in a quick oven.

"After placing the casserole in the oven, I start mixing the shortcake.

I use the ready mixed biscuit flour, and use the directions on the package for shortcake. I add cream and sugar to make the dough more rich. I add enough liquid so that the biscuits can be dropped on the baking sheet and baked. The vegetable salad I make by placing 2 slices of tomato, 4 slices of cucumber and sliced radishes in a lettuce cup. I add minced celery and onion to the mayonnaise. The individual shortcakes are made by splitting the biscuits, drizzling with butter, adding the berries, and topping with whipped cream, using one strawberry for garnish."

Glorified Hot Dog.

Miss Mary Tibbetts, Monmouth Apartments:

"The piece de resistance on our 30-minute dinners consists in a glorified hot dog. We buy the large ones that are one step removed from a frankfurter, split them, put a slice of cheese in the middle, fasten a strip of bacon around the outside and broil for 10 minutes. These make individual servings. The flavor of the bacon permeates the hot dog and gives a delicious flavor. With this we have one vegetable, such as cauliflower and a watercress and radish salad.

"When lettuce is more reasonable in price, we would select this for our salad green. We serve the cress with radishes sliced lengthwise almost to the end but not quite through. This salad is brought to the table in a wooden bowl and served with oil dressing. Our dessert is one that my mother was very fond of. We buy the canned whole peaches or apricots and drain. Add cream to cream cheese and blend until of a smooth consistency. If we have nuts on hand, we add a sprinkle of these. This cheese is used as a filling for the peach or apricot centers. The fruit is then fitted together, and rolled in cocoanut. Use the long shreds of moist cocoanut that come canned. On guest night, we also have muffins made from muffin mix."

Raspberry Fluff.

Miss Vena Seitzinger, 1900 F street northwest:

"Our dinners are often prepared in 30 minutes as all four of us bachelor girls work during the day. The most frequent menu is tomato juice cocktail, creamed tuna fish on toast, whipped potatoes, letuce and asparagus salad, and raspberry fluff. The potatoes are put on to cook first of all and then the dessert is made.

Suggested Are Casserole Dishes, Salads, Frankfurters.

"The dessert is fluffy like whipped gelatin, yet has the creamy texture of ice cream. It can be made in 25 minutes. To do this, purchase a pint of vanilla ice cream and a package of raspberry gelatin. Dissolve the gelatin in one cup boiling water. Add 1 cup of cold water to the mixture. Add the ice cream and stir until it is melted. Pour into the tray of the refrigerator. Stir twice while freezing. This dessert is a favorite with all our friends. Instead of the raspberry gelatin, strawberry gelatin can be used with strawberry ice cream or lemon gelatin with lemon custard ice cream."

Beans, Southern Style.

Mrs. C. C. Taylor, 3712 Fulton street northwest:

"I have several menus that I can rely on when meal preparation is to be hurried. If I know in advance, I often make a meat loaf in the morning and place this in the refrigerator until time to start meal preparation. On other nights, I have chops. I use frosted foods to eliminate vegetable preparation. My quick desserts are either ice cream or lemon chiffon pie made without thickening.

"We lived in the Carolinas for several years and enjoy food cooked in Southern style. I cook green beans with ham hocks but when there is not time for this I fry out a couple of slices of bacon, drain and crumble the bacon. I add this with the bacon fat to the cooked whole green beans. We think that this seasoning is better than butter. I cook potatoes quickly by dicing them into small cubes and cooking in milk. The milk cooks into a thick sauce or gravy. I season this well with butter, salt and pepper. It is nutritious and very delicious."

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

Bananas for Children.

Raw fruit diet in the treatment of acute diarrhea in infants, children and even in adults has generally included apples, because apples are rich in pectin, which is a soothing article. Bananas are, however, to be preferred to apples, because they satisfy the appetite better, are richer in mineral salts and have a high caloric value. Infants with summer dysentery on a banana diet do not lose weight and the general body chemistry, including the mineral balance, is better preserved than with other forms of treatment.

Pectin, which is in both fruits, has a capacity for swelling and absorbing germs and other poisons—a mechanical cleansing of the intestinal canal is thereby accomplished. Cooking changes the active form of pectin and is an improvement.

The method of the banana cure is described thus: After a period of six to 12 hours during which the infant receives only water, or sweetened water or sweetened tea, he gets no food other than bananas for the next three or four days. Bananas are served in five daily portions, and the daily amount is from five to eight bananas. Skins are removed and the pulp is beaten with a fork and served to the child with a spoon. After the three or four-day exclusive banana diet, the child is given a pint of whole milk with two or three bananas beaten into it. This milk and banana diet is continued for the next two or three days, when, in most cases, a fuller diet may be permitted.

Failure with the banana diet is generally due to the introduction of even the smallest quantity of gruel, flour or other foods during the first three or four days when the exclusive raw fruit diet should be maintained.

Spring Meals Of Vegetable Plates Popular

Flavors and Colors Are Important in Food Selection.

VEGETABLE plates have rapidly come into favor. They are especially desirable for spring menus. No hard and fast rules can be given for assembling a good vegetable dinner but some tried and tested hints may be helpful.

Choose flavors that blend well, usually not more than one strong-flavored vegetable. The selection of a variety of textures will make a more interesting combination. A salad may be used to accompany the vegetable plate. This will provide the needed crisp texture. Another thought to keep in mind is to have the vegetables of interesting shape. All mashed vegetables or buttered would not be interesting. Color is another item to keep in mind. Canning has made it possible to include on these menus foods that are not in season. Canned peas, tomatoes, green beans and spinach are a few of the quickly available vegetables that add color.

A vegetable casserole dish is an excellent selection for the main dish on such a dinner. This recipe glorifies canned peas.

Vegetable Casserole.

1 can of peas
2 tablespoons of butter
2 tablespoons of flour
Salt
Pepper
1 cup of milk
1 small can of mushrooms
2/3 cup of crushed corn flakes or buttered crumbs

Melt the butter. Blend with the flour. Add the seasonings and the juice drained from the peas. Add milk, and cook until smooth and thickened. Add peas and mushrooms. Pour into a casserole. Top with the crushed corn flakes or buttered crumbs and bake for 25 to 30 minutes. This amount will serve six generously.

A poorly made cream sauce will spoil the flavor of this dish. If you are not thoroughly successful in making it, substitute one of the cream soups in preparation. Cream of mushroom soup is excellent, and adds a final touch of flavor. To make this dish properly, add the contents of a 3½-ounce jar of the dried beef to 1 can of drained peas. Be sure that the beef is well shredded. Add 1 can of cream of mushroom soup. Heat in the top of a double boiler until steaming hot. Serve over toasted split rolls or over buttered triangles of toasted bread. The green color of the peas adds color to this flavorful dish. Dices of canned red pimento are also good for enhancing its appearance.

Tickless Time.

Does the ticking of the clock annoy you? Cover the clock with a glass bowl. You can still read the time but you won't hear the buzzing or ticking.

Frozen Desserts Need Much Care

Preparing the frozen dessert for the refrigerator tray has several fine points which are worth observing. First of all, to prevent separation combine all ingredients at approximately the same temperature. Chilling the mixture well before folding it into the whipped cream helps to freeze the dessert to a uniform, light texture. Never whip the cream too stiffly—an unpleasant, buttery taste is the outcome of heavy whipping. Use a 30 per cent cream and whip it just thick enough to hold its shape.

The difference between a good and bad frozen dessert rests on the sugar content in many cases. Sugar acts the same way in a frozen mixture as alcohol in the radiator of a car in winter—it lowers the temperature at which freezing takes place. It is advisable to follow measures exactly for recipes which have been developed for the electric refrigerator, because these provide for just the right amount of sugar. When canned fruit is substituted in a recipe calling for fresh fruit, allowances must be made for the sugar cooked into the fruit so that it will not affect freezing.

Whole fruits frozen in a dessert are very likely to crystallize, spoiling the taste and texture of the dish. A fruit, puree—the crushed fruit with most of the juice drained off—is ideal, turning out a uniformly textured dish. The juice may be used in place of other liquids called for in the same mixture. If added with the fruit, however, it thins the mixture down too much.

Very little stirring is necessary during the freezing of desserts, except in the case of thin mixtures such as ices and sherbets. These desserts should be stirred only twice when in the freezing tray. When ingredients are added to a partially frozen mixture, the bowl used for mixing should be chilled so that melting does not occur. A partially frozen mixture that does not require the addition of more ingredients may be stirred up from the bottom and down from the sides of the tray.

Foods Still Provide Chief Vitamin Source

Many people are buying their vitamins these days over the drug store counter. And they have been lured to do so by clever advertising through the radio, the press and the mails. The most amazing angle to this growing traffic in vitamin concentrates is the fact that foodstuffs are still the most desirable source of vitamins in the human diet.

Proof that the American people are "diet conscious" and are taking short cuts to obtain the necessary vitamins is shown in the number of vitamin concentrates on the market. Only a partial survey of such concentrates revealed recently 130 different products: 58 of vitamins A and D combinations; 24 of vitamins B and G combinations; 14 of vitamin C; 9 of vitamin D; 7 of vitamin E and 18 of different combinations of the various vitamins.

11th Child Health Week Focuses Attention On Necessity for Proper Feeding of Infants

Food Habits Begun in Early Youth Will Go on Through Life.

Agriculture Department Bulletin Suggests Balanced Diet.

By Jean Green.
The Post Food Editor.

SUNDAY marks the eleventh anniversary of a child health program that was started in Washington. Each year the President has issued a national proclamation designating one day as a child health day. Educators have gone one step further and made the first week in May child health week.

Many encouraging results have been noted as a result of this action. There is today an increasing number of adults who better understand the meaning of a well-balanced diet for children. The importance of this health-building program cannot be too strongly emphasized. It brings a diet rich in the factors that influence health and growth. It allows a longer growing period and builds up the resistance against disease.

These good food habits that form life-time food patterns should be established early. The child, when accustomed to the taste, texture, and temperature at an early age, will like foods that are healthful. This schedule will indeed follow this year's child health day slogan and "speed children on the road to health."

Rules for planning child's diets have been issued by the Children's Bureau of the United States Department of Labor. This diet is set forth in the Bulletin, "The Child. From 1 to 6," and gives a standard for planning the diet of the average preschool child. Use this for a guide when you are checking through your menus to find out how efficient you are as a mother.

A pint and a half of whole milk a day, but not more than one quart.

Fruit once or twice a day, including at least one raw fruit, such as orange, banana, grapefruit, or apple.

One or more fresh vegetables a day, including a green leafy vegetable such as turnip greens, spinach, or beet greens, at least three or four times a week—preferably daily.

An egg daily.

A serving of fresh meat or fish daily by the time the child is 18 months old; before that three or four times a week.

Cereal once or twice a day.

Bread and butter two or three times a day.

Cod-liver oil daily (at least for children under 2 years).

Grown-ups' diets are not for children, points out the Children's Bureau, and the child should not be given tastes of food that is not good for him to eat.

Contest of Post Seeking Recipes Featuring Raisins

National raisin week is celebrated next week. This plan started several years ago when a railroad executive decided to plan his dining car menus in keeping with the raisin festival at Fresno, Calif. Each year since that time the occasion has been celebrated nationally.

Our contest selects this nutritious fruit for the theme. It should bring to mind many old favorites. A pineapple shortcake that has a more zesty flavor because raisins are added to the sauce, or bread or cloverleaf rolls that gain needed mineral elements from the raisins used. These are suggestions.

Write your recipes clearly. Inclose name and address and mail to Jean Green, Post Food Editor, before May 7. The prizes are $3, $2 and three prizes of $1 each.

Jams, jellies and preserves make excellent gifts and always sell well at bazaars and food sales. Wax paper picnic cups, the shaped and not the plaited kind, make excellent holders for the give-away jelly. Just let the jelly cool slightly before pouring it in. Cover with colored cellophane

Mrs. Garner Steps Out To Southerners' Tea

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

When Mrs. John Nance Garner, hard-working, socially retiring wife of the Vice President, steps out to a party during office hours—it's news. That's exactly what she did yesterday afternoon when Mrs. Schuyler Otis Bland, wife of Representative Bland, of Virginia, and Mrs. Sam McReynolds, wife of Representative McReynolds, of Tennessee, entertained at a large tea at the Congressional Club.

HOPE R. MILLER.

Trimly turned out in a dark blue, white dotted frock and a wide-brimmed black straw hat, Mrs. Garner presided over the coffee urn and was the chief "reason" that more than half the guests stepped up for a hot cup of coffee on a warm afternoon.

The hostesses, receiving their long line of guests, wore lace and chiffon frocks that blended beautifully with each other. Mrs. Bland's was cream-colored with short sleeves; Mrs. McReynolds chose gray, fashioned with long tight sleeves. Both dresses were floor length, and both were set off with orchid corsages. From the punch bowl to the table where ice was served went most of the guests, finding themselves sooner or later at the long rose and daisy centered tea table.

Among the guests were four former schoolmates of Mrs. McReynolds, all visiting here from Chattanooga, Tenn., her home town. Mrs. Stephen Doughton was gowned in deep blue georgette crepe, girdled in cerise. When I glimpsed her she was chatting with another of the four, silver-haired Mrs. J. M. Gager, whose floor-length frock was of powder blue crepe, trimmed in narrow fluted bands. Mrs. R. N. Logan, in a bouffant black dress, and Mrs. T. H. Wagner, in blue lace, were the others in the very attractive quartet. Mrs. Holmes McMurran, of Newport News, Va., a house guest of Mrs. Bland, was also in the house party, and a center of much favorable attention.

Mrs. Swanson Is at Tea Table.

Among those assisting at the tea table was Mrs. Claude A. Swanson, wife of the Secretary of the Navy, who wore an attractive print frock with a black straw turban and a wisp of a veil. Mrs. Stanley Reed, wife of Justice Reed, took a turn at serving ice cream and orange ice. Her tailored navy blue frock was worn with a burgundy straw hat.

Others who assisted at the tea or ice table included Mrs. Morris Sheppard, in a stunning brown and beige ensemble; Mrs. Millard Tydings, who wore a navy blue and white print frock with a broad-brimmed navy straw hat, trimmed with a white gardenia in front; Mrs. Daniel Reed in a dark blue ensemble; Mrs. George Messersmith, Mrs. Joseph Byrnes, Mrs. Bertrand Snell, Mrs. Malin Craig and Mrs. Robert Doughton.

Generally assisting were Mrs. Fritz Lanham, in a swirling frock of black net with blue accents; Miss Jennie Moore, Mrs. W. C. Ramseyer, whose black dress was worn with a white bolero; Mrs. Leslie Garnett, Mrs. Ewing Thomason in a bouffant dress of black organza trimmed in pink, and Mrs. Darrell St. Clair, daughter of Mrs. McReynolds, whose grey chiffon frock was embroidered in blue and red and girdled with a double band of blue and red.

Here, there and everywhere were a bevy of pretty girls, dressed in gaily colored, floor-length frocks. They divided their time between serving at the punch bowl and mingling with the guests. In the group were Miss Barbara Ramseyer, Miss Gladys Carter, Miss Jane Ramseyer, Miss Nelson Whittaker, Miss Nell Alexander and Miss Mary Alice Thompson.

Miss Hilda Yen Takes Spotlight.

Glimpsed among the guests was Miss Hilda Yen, Chinese aviatrix and niece of a former Chinese Minister to Washington, who attracted much attention. With her Chinese robe, she wore a double peaked hat of mustard yellow crepe trimmed with a long scarf draped under her chin, and over her arm was a silver fox cape.

Mrs Emlen Davies arrived with her house guest, Mrs. Knight Cochrane, of Madison, Wis. Mrs. Hamilton Fish was there; also, Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross; Mme. Alexander Troyanovsky, wife of the Soviet Ambassador; Mme. Andres Pastoriza, wife of the Dominican Minister; Mme. W. Bostrom, wife of the Minister of Sweden. Mrs. Harry B. Hawes, in an attractive print frock and a broad-brimmed hat, was accompanied by her daughter, Mrs. Henderson Dunn, whose natural-colored straw hat was worn with a matching knitted suit. Mrs. John Overton was among the guests; also, Mrs. Blair Bannister, in a black and white ensemble; Mrs. George Ward, Miss Pauletta Guffey, Mrs. Lawrence Imhoff, Mrs. Richard M. Duncan, Mrs. Thomas Ford and Mrs. Monroe Johnson.

Mrs. Arthur Vandenberg, in a handsome navy blue crepe frock and a stunning red straw hat, was accompanied by her house guest, Mrs. O. N. Watson, of Grand Rapids, Mich. Mrs. Alva Adams was there; also, Mrs. Ralph Brewster, Mrs. Ernest Gruening, Mrs. Fred Biermann, Mrs. Hurd Hudson, Mrs. Richard M. Atkinson, Mrs. Karl Stefan, and Mrs. Sol Bloom and her daughter, Miss Vera Bloom, who had just returned from a trip to Hood College, where Representative Bloom delivered an address yesterday, and Miss Bloom talked, in French, before a large group of French students.

Praline Party At Howry Home

Washington's praline-party par excellence took place last evening when Louisiana's Representative Robert L. Mouton and the Misses Mary and Elizabeth Howry invited guests over for chicken gumbo and crayfish bisque.

The party, which was small and informal, was further enlivened by several cabaret numbers put on by the guests. The affair was an al fresco one, held at the Howry home in Georgetown. Guests divided their time between the large drawing room and the garden which opens therefrom. The Misses Howry sang several numbers, Representative Mouton also took part in the program, and numerous others participated.

Representative Mouton had sent to New Orleans for the edibles, and personally supervised the cooking.

About The Town

With Dudley Harmon

TOMORROW the woods between here and Worthington Valley will be full of Washingtonians eating picnic luncheons on their way to the Maryland Hunt Cup. Once again the day is here when society observes its annual custom of trekking 70 miles to see a race that lasts ten minutes and then turning right around and coming home again.

DUDLEY HARMON

Everything is democratic at this race. There are no boxes, grandstands or admission fees, and everybody rubs elbows on the hillside slope overlooking the track.

* * * *

ONLY AN EVENT as exciting as the Hunt Cup, this country's nearest thing to the Grand National, can lure so many away from the afternoon routine of cocktail parties. Pessimists are predicting that those who enjoy timber jumping had better see all they can right away, as it seems timber horses are being bred less and less frequently and might even become extinct. The highest such jump in these here United States is one of the features of tomorrow's race.

Among those expected to join the caravan from Washington are Mr. and Mrs. George Angus Garrett, Miss Margot Garrett, Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Exnicios, who will be joined at the hunt by Fred Roy, Mrs. Harold Hinton and Robert Mendoza of the Cuban embassy; Lieut. Forrest Close, U. S. N., and Miss Betty Hardie. There will be dozens of others from the Capital, as well as the people from New York who fly their own planes down every year, and hunting gentry from Warrenton, Middleburg and Green Spring Valley.

* * * *

DESPITE the terrific competition put up by the Maryland classic, the Fairfax Horse show is expected to draw a goodly crowd tomorrow. These shows get bigger and better every year since the Hunt was started a comparatively short time ago.

This time the officers of the Hunt are branching out and holding a large dance after the meet at the Washington Golf and Country Club. Numerous dinners will precede the festivities. Mr. and Mrs. Hugh S. Cumming, jr. will entertain friends that night at their home at 2811 O street in Georgetown, and Mr. and Mrs. Robert W. Wilson will also have people dining with them at their house in Chevy Chase. The Wilsons' guests will include Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Rust, jr., Mr. and Mrs. John A. Selby, Mr. and Mrs. John G. Laylin, Mrs. Tyner Dugdale and George Thompson.

Dr. William McClellan and Reed Thomas are Masters of the Hunt.

MORE TO SEE Adelaide Moffett Brooks crowned queen than to gape at the apple blossoms, which unfortunately came out prematurely and disappeared a while ago, a number of the queen's friends went down to Winchester from Washington yesterday. Mr. and Mrs. Jouett Shouse reversed the usual procedure by going to Kentucky ten days ahead of the Derby. Pen Women End D.C. Convention

Gifts Presented Retiring President, Mrs. Hoyt, at Breakfast.

Gifts to the retiring president of the National League of American Pen Women, Mrs. Phyllis Fergus Hoyt, and welcome to the new officers, Mrs. Audrey Wurdemann Auslander and members of her cabinet, marked the installation breakfast which yesterday closed the biennial convention of the league at the Willard Hotel.

Mrs. Hoyt who has traveled thousands of miles visiting the various branches during her two years as president, was given, by the members, a handsome fitted traveling case as well as a silver Paul Revere punch bowl, copied from that in the Metropolitan Museum, and a boquet of American beauty roses, to each of which was attached an individual message of appreciation.

Mrs. Bess Heath Olmstead presided at the breakfast, which was in the small ballroom of the Willard. It followed a business meeting which was one of the stormiest of the convention, the question of the hostess city for the next biennial session being the center of disturbance. After heated argument as to whether the decision should be made by the convention or left to the board, it was finally left in the hands of the latter. Chicago, Birmingham, Ala., Miami, Fla., San Francisco, Atlantic City and other places extended invitations.

Mrs. Grace Thompson Seton announced at the breakfast the Ted Malone poetry awards of $25, the first, for a lyric, to Clara Hyde, of Fort Thomas, Ky., and first for a sonnet to Inez Barclay Kirby, of Bethesda, Md. Second prize for a lyric went to Francesca V. McGettigan, of San Francisco. Other awards, which were announced were:

Final awards: For poetry, with Mabel Posegate as contest chairman, first prize to Blanche Willis Allen, of Modesto, Calif., "Adromeda Unchained;" honorable mentions to Anne Montgomery, Honolulu; Amy May Rogers, Knoxville, Tenn., and Ida McDaniel, Phoenix, Ariz.

Short story contest, Winnie M. Sanger, chairman, Class 1, shorts, first prize, Mrs. Eden P. White, Kansas City; second, Mrs. Kathleen Sutton, Anniston Branch. Class 2, short shorts, first, Mrs. J. B. White, Oklahoma City, second, Mrs. W. E. Turnispeed, Birmingham, Ala.

Juvenile short stories, Carol Ryrie Brink, chairman. Class 1, for children from 10 to 14, first, Mrs. Harriet Foster Bunn, Cambridge, Mass.; second, Mrs. Estelle Urbans, Yuba City, Calif., Class 2, best story for children from 5 to 10, first, Mrs. Marion Everett Hayn, Washington; second, Mrs. Bunn.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Unable to Love Husband, Wife Engages in Affair With Married Man; 'Is It Wrong?' She Asks.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a married woman 29 years old and have one child. I do not love my husband, although I had hoped to learn to love him after our baby was born. I have tried to love him because he is a wonderful man in every respect and has always shown me the greatest consideration. He loves me dearly and while I cannot love him, I respect him, and have spared his feelings by keeping the truth from him. Yet it is hard to be a wife to a man one cannot love. I have been miserable for months.

* * * *

To make matters worse, I am in love with another man and have been for some time. I believe he loves me. He, too, is married and has one child and no longer loves his wife, though he has not told her, not wanting to hurt her. For some time I have been meeting him secretly. We have been having an affair, in the accepted meaning of the word, but please don't think I am a common woman. I really and truly love him and deep in my heart I do not feel I am doing wrong in giving myself to him. Please tell me your opinion. Am I doing wrong in meeting him, under these conditions? And what about our children, his wife and my husband? A. B.

* * * *

DEAR A. B.: Your conduct is contemptible. If you possessed even a rudimentary concept of right and wrong (or, if you prefer, fair play) the least you could do, not loving your husband, would be to tell him the truth about it and work your problem out with his co-operation. Instead, as it is, you are repaying his love, trust and generosity with the most despicable kind of treachery. You are soiling his name. Your are making of him a cuckold, the sorriest figure of fun in the social history of man. And you are making a fool of yourself. You don't even know conclusively that your illicit lover loves you. All you know, for a certainty, is that he is willing to seduce you (if, indeed, seduction is necessary) when opportunity presents itself.

* * * *

You aren't withholding the truth from your husband in order to spare his feelings; nor is such gentle consideration responsible for the other man's furtive betrayal of his wife. Each of you is animated by selfishness and cowardice. You are accepting complete support and protection from your husband in return for the counterfeit giving of yourself to him; and you continue to dupe him with counterfeit coin because you haven't the courage or the honesty to disclaim your right to receive his gifts.

* * * *

Whether the other man cares one whit more (if as much) for you than he does for his wife is problematic. If he really loved you, it is highly unlikely he would be content to let the relationship drift along as a dead-end affair. Since he lives for the day, without thought of the morrow for you both, one assumes that he regards you as the complaisant plaything of the moment; that there will be women other than you in his life before his marriage goes on the rocks; and that it will probably require spirited action on his wife's part to sever the marriage bonds, if and when they are finally severed.

* * * *

Few, indeed, are the men who balk at hurting a woman when she stands in the way of something they want more than they want her. They are so scarce as to be virtually nonexistent, and when they do exist, they are saints, not men, as measured by human standards.

* * * *

It is just possible that your inability to love your husband is the direct outgrowth of unwise erotic adventuring in youth. Psychologists are well acquainted with the type of personality whose emotional excitement blooms, toadstool fashion, only in a dark atmosphere of secrecy, intrigue and defiance of social prohibition. Forbidden fruit alone seems to stimulate this person's fancy. This is because his earlier emotional experiences (his phychic conditioning to sexual manifestations of love) took place outside the social pale. Trained in a furtive, lawless, hole-and-corner type of emotional responsiveness attuned to a tempo of haste, secrecy and reckless adventure, he is (emotionally) like a fish out of water in the serene atmosphere of marriage, with its peace, dignity and privacy and its ample leisure for socially approved lovemaking.

* * * *

This sort of person could never find contentment in marriage, unless and until he had revised his whole approach to the love relationship. He would continually be seeking stimulation in just such ways as you and your married lover are seeking it. It is entirely possible that if you two were free to marry each other tomorrow, or were married to each other, you would be just as dissatisfied, just as bored, with each other as you fancy yourselves to be today with your respective mates.

* * * *

To ask another: "What about our children, his wife and my husband?" is to classify yourself as a person who needs a guardian, a person who isn't competent to face reality, to shoulder any sort of adult responsibility. What, indeed, of the child whose mother's character is made of such shoddy material that she doesn't know right from wrong, or, dimly perceiving the difference, yet hasn't the stamnia to follow the promptings of her own conscience?

* * * *

I should say that neither your child nor his was being given much of a chance—in the way of united parental example and inspirational association—to develop personality and character designed to withstand the temptations and buffetings of life. Unless both of you act in accordance with some more honorable conviction and some sterner ethical code, than would permit you to sneak and connive and befoul your respective nests, your husband and his wife will be much better off when legally freed from the bonds which hold them to you.

* * * *

The best advice I can give you is to have done with this furtive amour right now; to tell your husband how you have struggled to love him and failed; to ask his guidance and co-operation in finding a mutually acceptable solution; to take your problem, together, to physician or psychiatrist, and, if you cannot bring about a better mutual adjustment, to separate. The solution of psychic disharmony in marriage is never to be found in deceit, and particularly not in extra-marital amours. Deplorable though divorce may be, it is nevertheless preferable to living in dishonor. M. H.

Avoid Daytime Frills On Limited Budget

To achieve planned wardrobe economy women with high style ambitions and low purchasing powers were advised by a New York style expert to forsake daytime frills and to confine their taste for caprice to evening clothes. For daytime wear she recommended a basic color scheme for each season, simple two-piece suits that can be worn either with or without the jacket, casual millinery, and conservative shoes with medium built-up heels. Above all she stressed the need for meticulous grooming including attention to twisted stocking seams and run-down heels.

YOUR FIGURE, MADAME!

There Is an Excuse, Also a Remedy, for Spreading Hipline.

By Ida Jean Kain.

WHAT IS IT THAT gives the figure a matronly appearance? It is a waist that has settled into the hips. That waistline roll may be caused by soft muscles and slumping rather than by excess weight or age. Stop settling down with your birthdays!

There is some excuse for a spreading hipline, because we all have to sit too many hours a day, but there is none for a dumpy waistline. Sitting correctly and pulling up exercises the waistline muscles. If it is too late for preventive measures, however, stretching and bending will pull your waist and hips apart like nothing else will.

You like to stretch, so why not put your stretching into systematic exercise? Stretching stirs up a laggard circulation, relieves nerve tension and leaves you feeling relaxed and rested. Try it, arms over head! Now, stretch! Pull that settled waistline up and away, then relax completely and stretch again, pulling your waist as slim as you can make it.

Take an Easy Stretch.

Here is an easy waistline stretch:

POSITION: Stand on the floor on the knees, with hands clasped high over head.

MOVEMENT: Still stretching up with the clasped hands, bend the trunk at the waist to the extreme left, return to upright position, and bend to the right. And don't ever think that doesn't squeeze the fat pads and strengthen weak muscles! Begin with a couple of sideway stretches a day and gradually increase the number of times.

Shun the waistline roll! Don't let your waist settle down into the hips.

How about another? You will get so you like the feel of these stretching gymnastics.

POSITION: Sitting on the floor with the feet spread wide apart, arms stretched high over head, bend forward at the waist. Hold the arms close to the head, and swing trunk from waist.

MOVEMENT: Swing the trunk over and grasp the left foot with the left hand. Then swing over to the right, and grasp the right foot with the right hand. Throughout the movement, hold the arms close against the sides of the head. Begin slowly with this exercise, for it is rather strenuous.

You Stretch Anyway, So Why Not Try It as an Exercise?

In case the foregoing exercise was too much for you, try this one:

MOVEMENT: Keeping the back straight, but bending and twisting the body at the waist, touch the right elbow to the right knee and left elbow to the left knee. Repeat six times, and then see if you cannot touch the right elbow to the left knee, and the left elbow to the right knee. When you can do that, spread the legs apart and try touching elbows to the floor in the space between the knees.

All these exercises are wonderfully supplying. They will make you feel firm and look slim.

Peasant-type Rustic Silk Costume

SILK GOES rustic in this effective peasant-type costume designed by Elizabeth Hawes. The material is Indian silk in natural color, dramatized by a girdle in gay stripes. The dress has a high draped neckline, long fitted sleeves and front fullness in the skirt. The full-length coat of same fabric is sleeveless; handbag is made of same material as ensemble. Topping the costume is a high-crowned peasant hat in natural straw lined with green suede.

Costumes Fashioned For Show Saturday

'Peter Pan' Is Being Staged by P.-T. A. Group.

Even fairies, elves and mermaids have their own fashions. In order to design costumes for the children representing these legendary creatures in the production of "Peter Pan" tomorrow and Monday at the Roosevelt High School, Mrs. Kitty Liebschutz has spent many hours of research. She has created for Peter a suit and cap of green and russet leaves embodying the spirit of the woodland, such a suit as he himself might have put together when he found himself without raiment in the forest.

The dashing and colorful regalia of Capt. Hook and his pirates, of Tiger Lily, Little Panther and the other Indians, while distinctly original in details, follows tradition more closely than the others.

The production is being given by the Children's Studio of Drama, under auspices of Parent-Teacher organizations for the benefit of the Langdon School for Crippled Children. Performances will be at 3 o'clock tomorrow afternoon and 8 o'clock Monday night.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, April 28.

TALLULAH BANKHEAD, that indestructible ball of fire from Alabama, is at it again, after too long a period of no runs, no hits, all errors. The super-colossal bust of her "Anthony and Cleopatra" last fall merely slowed her down a bit, but her marriage to the handsome actor, John Emery, perked Missy up right smart, and now she is with us again in a revival of Somerset Maugham's very clever British comedy, "The Circle." John's in the troupe, too.

ALICE HUGHES

The play should do a few weeks this spring, for it is a smart and entertaining bit of hocus-pocus. Old Lady Hughes well remembers its original American production nigh onto 16 years ago, with a cast headed by John Drew and Mrs. Leslie Carter. Of course, ole Miss Hughes was practically carried in by her Nana. Yes, she was—she cut senior English to ribbons to make the matinee.

Now Talloo is doing a role once played by Estelle Winwood, and is co-starred in the lights with Grace George. A visit to the Bankhead dressing room at the Playhouse is worth making, believe me, for if Tally isn't a mighty actress, she's a mass of personality plus. She drinks a lot of strong tea, smokes English cigarettes and speaks her mind in plain, simple English. I saw a magazine picture of Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt on her dressing table. "I think she is the kindest woman I ever knew," opines the Bankhead. Then another gulp of oolong—another puff.

Talloo is not shot through with luck. She's the victim of her own legend, built during her decade in London, when she had that staid old capital doing handstands and neck-spins for years. Ever since, she has been supposed to possess inexhaustible vitality. "God knows why!" she says, "I'm always tired." But the bounding Bankhead was 15 years younger, then! Moreover, people have always expected a bit too much of Talloo on stage and screen. She's far more a vivid person than artist, and I'll bet she'll admit it if you back her in a corner. But who on this earth can do that?

* * * *

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Will you kindly lend me the old family shotgun? I'll only loose it off twice. Thanks. Spring comes to my neighborhood when all the bedroom windows are open wide, and some foul fiend across the courtyard turns on his radio promptly at 7:15 a. m. What do you think comes out every day—a xylophone solo. Word of honor! Who would play, or listen to, a xylophone at that ungodly hour? Why, the beast in the next apartment house! So just ship me that ole pump gun and I'll bang a little birdshot into his window when I locate the snake!

* * * *

Nice to see Frances Starr around town. This Belasco star came in for a look around from her Washington home, where she is Mrs. R. Golden Donaldson. I'd like to see her again in a swell play.

* * * *

John LaManna opened a theatrical bar (fie!) on East Forty-eighth street not long ago, and asked his pals to dig up some good wall mottoes. Christopher Morley found this one in Shakespeare's "Anthony and Cleopatra"—"I have yet room for six scotches more!"—and it now hangs in Johnny's pub. Six more! What an optimist! What a sucker!

* * * *

Not long ago I reprinted a personal ad here. It called for blondes ready to die for their country, and I wondered what the catch was. Second bulletin now arrives. Jean Colwell proposes to organize "blonde brigades" all over the country—and the press release I have says she thinks no soldier in the world would "shoot at a lovely blonde woman." Can you tie it? Still, we don't know the real catch, but the minute I learn it I'll pass it on. This is as daffy a publicity stunt as I've ever seen—and the suspense is killing me.

(For a Hen Party)

I will not under any circumstances tell how many pounds I have lost on this or that diet or what it consists of.

On meeting a friend—or enemy—I will summon all my will power to keep my eyes glued on her face and not let them run over her in appraisal of what she has on.

I will not relate how my maid bullies me and my butcher cheats me. Nor will I detail the eating and snoring habits of my husband, or tell how nervous my child or my dog is.

When I talk to any other woman I will look her in the eye and try to appear interested and not keep glancing nervously around the room like a stag stuck with a wall flower at a dance.

When I meet a stranger, I will not say patronizingly "Oh yes," when I learn she is from Four Corners, Ill., and then proceed with a monologue about my life in Washington, New York or other points East.

When another woman starts telling about what happened to her, I will not shout her down and tell what happened to me.

I will master the technique of listening automatically to long-winded personal anecdotes goggle-eyed and with the proper exclamations without really bothering to hear them.

When one of the girls is relating a breath-taking piece of gossip, I will not hold up the narrative by asking for irrelevant details.

I will not mention my illustrious forbears on my mother's side, or any other side, nor tell of the marvelous old antiques we found in the attic of the old home.

When I mention the name of my doctor I will not add that he is the biggest specialist in town.

I will not casually mention my influential friends, neither will I bring in the fact that Mrs. Strutter, whose husband is one of the "biggest men" at the Noodle Manufacturing Company, lives in my block.

I will not talk about Wally or Robert Taylor.

I will not give graphic accounts of my friends' operations nor relate the obstetrical details in connection with their new babies. I will not mention the names of absentees wholly in relation to their sinuses, mastoids, gall bladders, etc.

I will not drink in avidly the whispered details of the "goings on" in smart cafe society and then remark complacently, "Well I suppose I'm just an old-fashioned girl. . . ."

I will not use the "poor little me" racket—"I'm just a country girl," "of course I'm not a highbrow," "I never have any clothes"—in fishing for compliments.

I will never talk about myself—well, hardly ever.

The next day I will not call up my best friend and say 'Wasn't it a perfectly lovely party, but——"

Waistlines Strike New Low in Paris

Paris (U.P.)—Waistlines fell to a new low, skirt slits jumped to a new high, and riotous gypsy gowns were heavily bid at the opening of Paris's summer fashion market when Joseph Paquin offered the first of the important summer collections to the public. He features beltless "snake-hip" dresses and zips them together from stem to stern.

The low hip-line in many cases does not have any belt above it but marks the waist circumference with meticulous use of tucks, shirrings or horizontal folds.

Chorus on Ice To Join Show At Shoreham

International Carnival With Stellar Skaters Opens Monday Night.

By Chanticleer

A chorus of ice-skating artists—pretty girls on skates—will feature the opening Monday night of the International Ice Carnival to be staged in the Blue Room at the Shoreham each night next week during the dinner and supper hours. The girls will augment the solo stars and team exhibitions. The chorus will be directed by Paul Von Gassner, former Hungarian national champion and runner-up for the world's title.

Irmgard Merkel, winner of the Swiss ice-skating championship, will be one of the stars. The swan solo will be one of the numbers of Marguerite Verden, Viennese figure-skating champion.

Festival-minded, the Pall Mall Room, which has been conducting an imaginary tour of the world every Wednesday evening, will stay home next week and hold its own Maytime festival.

Dick Butler has brought Jayne Lowe and Clyde Kissinger, clever instrumental and vocal performers, to the Anchor Room. These stars who go under the professional name of "We Two" were recently featured at some of the country's top-notch clubs.

The Lotus this week features a five sister act. The act is filled with novelty. The team of Stephanie and Chraig glides through an original waltz called the "Marionette." The Lotus also has this week the grown-up version of Charlie McCarthy in the person of Jerry. Jerry not only carries on conversation, but walks, bows and sits.

Patrons in the Carlton's Shar-Zad stood up and applauded after the King's Jesters stepped off the band stand last night to put on their floor show. The number which seemed to tickle their fancy was George Howard's rendition of "Today I am a Man."

There are only a few weeks left in which to enjoy the sophisticated continental atmosphere of the Russian Troika. This Connecticut avenue club closes May 21. By request, the burlesque of Othello is being continued as a part of the show.

Chatter: Evelyn Tyner, who plays the piano at the Blue Grotto can be heard every Wednesday evening over WJSV and that fifteen minute program is a sample of what is in store for those who drop in on The Willard's brand-new night spot.

Wedding bells will ring soon for Helene Green, local glamour at the King Cole Room. We hope that this will not mean the end of what promised to be a brilliant career.

This sort of weather in a boon to the Madrillon. They have already in operation their air-conditioning system. The club was packed at lunch time yesterday by those who had come in for a special lunch or a long, cool drink.

What does the maitre d'hotel do when he is not planning for the entertainment and pleasure of others? Theon at the Wardman Park's metronome room does amateur photography.

Another news flash—for you lassies, the original Sarong, which was worn by Dorothy Lamour in her latest picture. Jungle Love will be your reward if you can name the ingredients of the cocktail "Jungle Love Cocktail," now being served at the Hi Hat.

Worker's Alliance Official Fined $5 In 'Sit-Down' Case

Judge John P. McMahon yesterday ordered Chauncey Harris, colored 33, official of the District Workers' Alliance, to pay a $5 fine on a disorderly conduct charge growing out of an attempted "sit down" at offices of the Public Assistance Division, 1422 U street northwest.

Mrs. Florence Huff, district supervisor in charge of the office, testified Harris had come to the office early to seek relief for Mrs. Matilda Jones, colored, 24, mother of three children, who had been taken from the rolls and offered transportation back to her home in North Carolina.

At closing time, Mrs. Huff said, Harris had refused to leave, and three employes of the office had attempted to put him out.

Jacob Baker, president of the United Federal Workers of America, announced yesterday that the organization believed the General Accounting Office made a very strained interpretation of the President's Executive Order No. 7845 in issuing regulations requiring all emergency employes to take their leave before June 30. According to Baker, the District Organizing Committee of the U. F. W. A. conferred with the Acting Comptroller General, but any action to alter the interpretation was refused.

Marvin H. McIntyre, secretary to the President, will be Starling's side.

Contract Bridge

Clever Establishment Play.

The establishment of a suit by straight leads, or by ruffing, usually is a simple matter, hardly to be mentioned in the same breath with squeeze plays and various other coups. But even an establishment play may involve slight complications. Consider the ingenious method whereby the declarer in the following hand set up a trick on which to discard a loser.

West, dealer.
East-West vulnerable.

North:
◇ A 10 8 4

West:
♠ Q 9
♡ K Q 6
◇ K 7 5 3 2
♣ A 7 5

East:
♠ J 7 3
♡ 8 5 4
◇ J 9
♣ K 9 6 4 2

South:
♠ K 10 8 6
♡ A J 10 9 3 2
◇ Q 6

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
1 ◇	Double	Pass	2 ♡
Pass	2 N T	Pass	4 ♡
Double	Pass	Pass	Pass

I hasten to point out that I most emphatically do not approve North's bidding. First, North did not have the requirements for a takeout double of one diamond; in fact, with substantial diamond strength, his correct strategy was to pass and await developments. Since he did double, however, and since South properly responded with two hearts, North was then "stuck." And, as is usually the case, he took the worst way out. His two notrump was a model of sheer optimism, the singleton heart being a particularly bad feature. Since he had gotten himself into the mess, North should meekly have passed to the two heart bid.

I realize that this criticism of the bidding may sound inconsistent in the light of what transpired, because as it happened South fulfilled his contract. This, however, was due to a combination of beautiful play on declarer's part and a distribution of honors in the defenders' hands that made a perfect defense very difficult. West's penalty double of four hearts was none too sound but perhaps he knew that North was an habitual overbidder.

Finding a satisfactory opening lead was West's first difficulty. He finally settled on the club ace. East hoped that this lead represented an original holding of ace and one club and, fearing any shift of leads, gave a "come-on" signal. Declarer ruffed the club king and laid down thes ace and jack of trumps. West won, and cashed his other trump trick, then, afraid to lead from the spade queen or diamond king, exited with a third club. Dummy won and declarer discarded a spade, not a diamond (as I fear many players would do). He then discarded another spade on th last club, after which he led to his spade king and returned to dummy's spade ace. Now he was able to ruff a spade and, since the suit originally had broken 3-2, dummy's five-spot was established as a sure trick upon which to discard a losing diamond.

North probably congratulated himself for his share in reaching the game contract, but I doubt that he will grow rich on the sort of bidding he used in this hand.

Lobby Inquiry Is Condemned By Publishers

Labor Relations Board Also Assailed for 'Unconstitutional Acts.'

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 28.—The American Newspaper Publishers Association, having re-elected its principal officers, passed resolutions today condemning what it called unconstitutional acts of the Senate Lobby Investigating Committee and the National Labor Relations Board.

James G. Stahlman, 45, publisher of the Nashville (Tenn.) Banner and one of the association's youngest presidents, was re-elected for a secone one-year term.

John S. McCarrens, of the Cleveland Plain Dealer, was re-elected vice president; Walter M. Dear, of the Jersey City (N. J.) Jersey Journal, was re-elected treasurer, and John S. Parks, of the Fort Smith (Ark.) Times-Record, was elected secretary to succeed the late E. H. Harris, of the Richmond (Ind.) Palladium Item.

Lobby Inquirers Assailed.

One convention resolution condemned the Senate lobby committee for efforts "to intimidate citizens in the exercise of their constitutionally guaranteed right to petition Congress by attempting to compel them to turn over to the committee by the command of a dragnet subpena their private records, papers and accounts."

It praised Frank E. Gannett, Rochester (N. Y.) publisher and chairman of the National Committee to Uphold Constitutional Government, for resisting the committee.

Another resolution warned publishers to resist any effort by the Labor Relations Board to "call publishers to account for material they have printed and circulated," as the board, said the resolution, had done in two instances.

Warns Advertisers.

Stahlman warned advertisers that they, like newspaper editors, "must jealously guard" the reading material they placed before the public. This, he told a luncheon of the Advertising Club of New York, is a necessity toward maintaining a free press in the United States.

"The press of this country is not venal or emasculated," he said. "It is neither impotent nor cowardly. As a whole it is virile and courageous and it is fulfilling its obligations to a citizenship from which it derives all its rights and privileges.

"The fact that the daily newspapers of America have a circulation today of more than 42,000,000 copies—an all time high—is the best answer to loose assertions that reader interest in the press is on the decline."

"We must all be on guard against any encroachments through license, taxation, censorship on other limitations upon free speech or a free press, for these encroachments will come subtly and gradually through limitations, legal or otherwise, wherever possible of easy enforcement or where accepted without defense."

New Chief of NEC

LOWELL MELLETT, former editor of the Washington Daily News, who has been nominated by President Roosevelt to be executive director of the National Emergency Council. Mellett succeeds Eugene Leggett, who has filled the post temporarily since the resignation of Frank Walker two years ago.

Move Reported For $1,000,000 To Revive NEC

Roosevelt Wants to Renew Agency for Campaign, Representatives Say.

Reports that President Roosevelt plans to revive the National Emergency Council, with $1,000,000 from relief funds, for the period of the political campaign, came yesterday from members of a House Appropriations sub-committee.

At the same time, the President nominated Lowell Mellett, former editor of the Washington Daily News, to be director of the council.

It was recalled at the Capitol that the council was terminated by Executive order dated last September 16, effective last December 31. A supplemental order extended its life until next June 30.

Eugene Leggett, who has served recently as acting director, was heard by the committee, with associates.

"They said they wanted $1,000,000 for the NEC for the emergency of the campaign," Representative Taber (Republican), New York said.

"We spent most of the day listening to requests for founds from the agencies set up by executive order which live on relief," declared Representative Bacon, also a New York Republican.

In addition to the NEC request, there was one for $1,000,000 for the National Resources Board, $800,000 for the Prison Industries Board, and $11,000,000 for the Puerto Rico Recovery Administration.

Republican members of the committee said they would attempt to amend the recovery measure to prohibit the President from creating Federal agencies by executive order and financing them from relief funds.

Kiwanis Attendance Of Dr. Baker Hailed

Dr. George A. Baker, optometrist, was congratulated yesterday by his associates in the Kiwanis Club on his completion of 19 years of perfect attendance at Kiwanis meetings. His record is believed to be unequaled in the national organization.

Funeral Set Tomorrow For Man Killed in Fall

Funeral services for William B. Baker, 57, who died of a broken neck Wednesday, will be held tomorrow at 2 p. m. at the W. W. Chambers funeral home, 1400 Chapin street northwest. Mr. Baker died as the result of a fall from a window in a Brookmont, Md., home, where he had installed electrical wiring. A native of Boston, he was educated in New York. He was a member of National Lodge, No. 12, F. A. A. M. Burial will be in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

The Keefer Cup Winner—and the Lucky Sticks

Mrs. T. J. Johnson, Army and Navy, who turned in a net score of 155 for 36-holes over the Chevy Chase course, and won the Keefer Cup. Mrs. J. W. Ludewig, clubmate of the winner, was second, with a 158 total.

Mrs. Johnson Wins Keefer Cup With 155; Mrs. Ludewig Second

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

Army and Navy Country Club's women's champion, Mrs. T. J. Johnson, added her name to the winners of the Mrs. Frank R. Keefer Cup yesterday as she totaled a net score of 155 for the 36-hole tournament over the Chevy Chase course, three strokes better than a clubmate, Mrs. J. W. Ludewig.

Mrs. Johnson who was in second place at the end of the first day's play with 90-11—79, lowered her score by three strokes to an 87 and the second day's net 76 was decisive. A member of the club's second team, she was an eight handicap player last year but this season it was raised to 11, and after yesterday's play it will probably come right back down.

The gross prize went to Helen Dettweiler, leader at the half-way mark with a gross 80 and net 79. The Congressional star went four strokes higher with a pair of 42s, for an 84, a score that was still six shots better than Mrs. Betty Meckley's 87-83, the second best gross score.

Mrs. Ludewig shot 95-91 for the two day's play and substracted a 14 handicap from each score for her 158 total. In a third place tie were Mrs. C. P. Medley, Indian Spring, who lowered her first day's 96 by nine strokes yesterday, shooting an 87 despite three bad holes, and Miss Louise Claytor, who played consistently, for the two rounds with 90-89 and deducted a 20 handicap total for 159.

Helen Dettweiler's net total was 160, good enough for fifth prize, but she elected to take the gross award. Mrs. G. F. Hussey, Army and Navy, and Mrs. L. G. Pray, Manor, tied for fifth place with totals of 162. Mrs. Hussey had 89-91-18—162, and Mrs. Pray, 86-90-14—162.

Mrs. J. W. Beller, of the host club, completed the list of prize winners with 93-90-23—163.

Mrs. Betty Meckley, Indian Spring ace, and Marion Brown, Manor, each shot 83s yesterday for the lowest rounds of the day. Helen Dettweiler's 84 was next, while Mrs. Walter Stokes, defending champion, rallied with an 86.

Mrs. Johnson started with a three-putt green and followed with a four-putter on the second hole, looking little like a champion. She played the remainder of the nine in 2 under five's, however, and was out in 46.

The second nine was the round that made her victory possible. She started with a par 3 on the tenth,

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Philadelphia, April 28.—Around the league: NEW YORK — Murderers' Row, without Joe DiMaggio, has been terrorizing nobody and the panic would be on were it not for the imminent return of Signor Giuseppe to the line-up . . . With Lou Gehrig virtually unable to buy a hit, the Yankees have been just another ball team, and not such a hot one at that . . . It seems that Lefty Gomez, the high lama of McCarthy's pitching staff, has not been able to win any of his three starts . . . Myril Hoag, DiMaggio's substitute, is batting a cool .350 but the Yanks are not winning ball games . . . and the chances are that Manager Joe McCarthy is sighing for Tony Lazzeri and that long wallop that used to emanate from his bat every so often . . . Joe (Flash) Gordon is a nice boy, ambitious, and clever on double plays, but . . . the Yankees figure to go only as far as DiMaggio can take 'em.

POVICH.

* * * *

PHILADELPHIA—the A's have a lot of ball players best described by Mike Gonzales, Cuban coach of the Cardinals: "Good field, no hit" . . . and with Wally Moses still nursing his sore shoulder the A's are taking an awful rap . . . In Dario Lodigiani, Connie Mack picked up a $35,000 prize package, but the A's pitchers are something else again . . . Lee Ross, who beat the Red Sox and the Yankees for the Athletics' only two wins of the year, is a rising star, but ancient Harry Kelley, who for the past two years was the only big league pitcher on the club, can't get anybody out . . . at least not many . . . the A's need a shortstop, a first baseman, an outfielder and three pitchers . . . that's all.

* * * *

BOSTON—The Red Sox are beginning to show signs . . . already they have done the rest of the league a favor by knocking off the Yankees in four out of five games . . . if righthanded pitching doesn't stop Joe Cronin's righthanded batting order, they'll have a powerful voice in the disposition of the pennant . . . That big year they've been predicting for Fritz Ostermueller may be here . . . and Lefty Grove who stopped the Yanks with five hits today is not exactly washed up . . . Jimmy Foxx has been little help yet, however . . . and on the heels of his last two dismal seasons at bat, Boston folks as well as the pitchers around the league are beginning to have their suspicions . . . if true, that would be too bad.

* * * *

WASHINGTON—Bucky Harris has his fingers crossed, hoping it isn't a dream . . . The team that was supposed to have a wobbly pitching staff has seen its hurlers go the route in seven of the nine games . . . and the Nats have been winning with their big guns, Bonura and Stone strangely silent . . . If they start hitting, who

By Lewis F. Atchison.

With a loud kerplunk that shook the direction finding hand off Georgetown University's seismograph, Chief Sanooki, titanic Redskin tussler, pinned the fat frame of Man Mountain Jacobs in the featured fuss last night at Turner's Arena.

The disturbance, allowing for a few minutes when police were in action trying to separate the gladiators and Referee Benny Bortnick in a wild melee outside the ropes, consumed exactly 18 minutes. And there wasn't a dull moment. Several times the front pew customers went scurrying to cover as a hefty wrestler or referee came hurtling their way.

Jacobs, panting like a freight engine with a leaky boiler, claimed a foul, pointing out that his feet were dangling in the lower strand of ropes when Bortnick counted him out. They were, too. But Bortnick, minus several pounds of weight and a shirt, torn to shreds trying to break various illegal holds, was in no mood to quibble over a small piece of hemp. He arrived at three in such a hurry there is suspicion he skipped the first two figures.

Police also were necessary to preserve law and some semblance of order when Dr. Dropkick Murphy went into his semi-final song and dance with "Satan" Schultz. It was a 32-minute draw, the boys spending two minutes of their own

Maryland's Team Beats Lafayette

By Jack Munhall.

With George (Lefty) Wood pitching shut-out baseball until the seventh inning, the University of Maryland won its eighth game of the season yesterday, defeating Lafayette College, 7-3 at College Park.

Wood, a slender curve baller, turned in one of the best games of his career in holding the Bisons to five hits, two of them scratchy affairs, and justly deserved a shutout.

His mates who gave him only fair support all afternoon, however, deprived him of that honor by misplaying a pair of hits in the seventh inning and paving the way for all three enemy tallies.

Wood had a two-hitter in his possession when that seventh frame opened but his dreams of a shutout faded suddenly as first the usually reliable "Shorty" Chumbris failed him at short and then Bill Bryant betrayed him in centerfield.

After Wood had yielded his first and only walk of the game to Sargent after one was out, Chumbris broke too slowly on Rossiter's grounder, allowing it to go through him for a single. This placed men on first and second. Even then Wood would have escaped without giving up a run had not Bryant elected to try a shoe string catch off Ballis' short looper to center.

Ball Eludes Bryant.

The ball eluded Bryant and rolled deep into the field and before it was returned to the infield, both Sargent and Rossiter scored and Ballis raced all the way to third. Lafayette then added its third and last run when Ballis crossed the plate as Chumbris threw out Farinon at first.

Though their fielding was spotty, little criticism can be directed at the Terps' hitting, for they swatted Jack Hageman, Lafayette's ace righthander, for 11 hits, including Lefty Chumbris' second homer in as many days. It was the first defeat in four games for the 6-foot 4-inch Hageman and the second loss of the season for the Bisons.

Two Runs on One Hit.

Maryland picked up its first two runs in the opening frame on one hit. Shorty Chumbris received life at first base when the third baseman booted his easy roller. And then after George Knepley flied out, Lefty Chumbris was safe at first on an error by the second baseman and brother Shorty moved to second. They both scored on Mike Surgent's hot single to center.

The Terps added another pair in the fourth on Chumbris' round-tripper and singles by Waverly Wheeler, Johnson and Crisafull coupled with a walk to Pitcher Wood. They made the count 5-0 in the fifth when Surgent singled and Crisafull and Wood, again singled in succession after two were out.

Maryland pushed across its last two counters in the sixth on two walks and two hits.

Wheeler, Surgent, Eddie Johnson and Wood all obtained two hits for the Old Liners, while young Johnson starred afield, handling nine chances without a bobble.

Lefty Grove Masters Yankees As Red Sox Score 6-1 Victory

Boston Executes Triple Play to Halt Champions; Grove Gives 5 Hits; Gomez Shelled.

New York, April 28 (AP).—The Boston Red Sox did everything right today—including a snappy bit of fielding for the year's first triple play—and walloped the world champion Yankees 6 to 1 behind the masterful flinging of the aged Bob (Lefty) Grove.

They clubbed Lefty Gomez for the game-clinching four-run rally on 5 of their 12 hits in the fourth inning and then sat back and watched as Grove finished off a 5-hitter. He fanned five, and except for the third, when the Yanks scored their lone tally, he allowed only two runners to get as far as second base.

The Yanks threatened in the ninth when a fumble and a walk put George Selkirk and Flash Gordon on first and second base. Joe Glenn, filling in at catcher for the injured Bill Dickey, lined to Jimmy Foxx, who tossed to Joe Cronin to complete a double play on Selkirk. Cronin shot the ball right back and Foxx caught Gordon off first for the triple killing, first in the big leagues this season.

Gomez was taken out at the start of the fifth and Lee Stine finished up. Dock Cramer and Bobby Doerr connected for three hits each to lead the Boston attack.

Lewis Stars at Bat, Drives in Six Runs

W. Ferrell Hurls Smart Ball to Win His Third Victory.

Griffs' Outfielder Offers Apology After Rage Over Strike-Out.

By Shirley Povich.
A Staff Correspondent.

Philadelphia, April 28.—Twenty-one-year-old Buddy Lewis, who should be a great help to the Nats when he grows up, manfully stepped to the plate on various occasions this afternoon and slapped the Athletics dizzy. With the hits that boomed from the bat of the fuzzy-cheeked young third baseman, the Nats rode to a 7-to-2 victory over the Philadelphians. Mrs. Lewis' little boy drove six of those seven runs across the plate and that other run by the Nats was scored before he had a chance to go to bat.

LEWIS.

Buddy began blasting in the third inning after the Nats had tied the score at 1-1. Finding the Ferrell brothers on base with one out our hero rammed a home run over the rightfield wall. It was no bunt. It cleared the 40-foot barrier by a goodly margin and plopped into Twentieth street beyond.

It seems that the Ferrell brothers, one or both of 'em, were always getting on base, because when Lewis arrived at the plate in the fifth inning there they were on second and third—the pair of 'em. So Mrs. Lewis' lad lammed a single over second base and deposited the Ferrell freres home to boost the Nats' lead to 6-1.

But he wasn't through. In the seventh after the A's had hacked a run off Washington's lead, our hero got that run back with his third straight hit of the day—a slashing single into left that scored Buddy Myer.

Aside from Lewis, the Nats weren't doing much hitting, being held to eight blows by George Caster and Harry Kelly. But the A's weren't going wild at bat, either, for that matter. Because Wes Ferrell held 'em to eight hits in winning his third straight game of the season.

Almada Thumbed Out.

The Nats won without benefit of the services of Outfielder Mel Almada after the fifth inning. Almada, who had driven in the first run of the game for the Nats, was thumbed out of the proceedings by Umpire John Quinn, who was not exactly pleased when the Mexican lad kicked him in the shins during a protest of a called third strike.

To the great glee of the 9,100 Ladies' Day fans and cash customers, Almada was banished. Stomping about in the dirt near home plate to show his disgust at Quinn's decision, the Mexican became overly enthusiastic and booted the umpire either by accident or design. He immediately apologized but Quinn was unrelenting and shooed him off the field.

Ferrell served a heady game in holding the A's to a run in the first inning and another in the sixth. His own wild throw was responsible for the first run, and after Lewis' homer had put him in a commanding lead, the temperamental righthander was the personification of care and caution.

Caster Driven Off Mound.

When the proceedings started, the Nats found themselves facing George Caster and his knuckle ball, but they rid themselves of Caster in the third inning and Harry Kelley pitched the rest of the game for Connie Mack.

They filled the bases against Caster with none out in the third inning when Myer and Wes Ferrell drew passes, sandwiching a cheap hit by Rick Ferrell. Almada's long fly to Finney scored Myer with the tying run and then Lewis swung into action—bamm! a home run over the rightfield wall.

There was nothing cheap about Rick Ferrell's smashing single to left that opened the fifth inning, however. And Brother Wes tossed in a two-bagger that moved Ricky to third. After Almada succeeded in striking out and getting thumbed out, young Mr. Lewis thumped a single to center to score the Nats' battery.

A muff by Wayne Ambler put Buddy Myer on base in the seventh inning and Lewis took him off with a drive into left center that went for a single and brought in the Nats' last run of the day.

As if in remorse at his wild throw to first which enabled Bill Werber to scoot to third and be in a position to score on Haas' double that followed, Ferrell upped and struck out Robert Johnson and Gene Hasson to end that inning.

During those last eight innings, he was pretty good. Hasson doubled off the rightfield wall in the sixth and scored on Lodigiani's single, but there is no record of any other runs by the Mackmen.

Philadelphia, April 28.—Mel Almada's immediate future in the American League tonight lies with Umpire John Quinn.

On Quinn's report to League President Will Harridge will depend the fate of the Nats' Mexican outfielder, who may be deemed guilty of one of the greatest crimes against American League regulations—assaulting an umpire.

If Quinn is not disposed to deal leniently with Almada in his report to the league president concerning the kicking incident in today's Washington-Philadelphia game, the Mexican faces a heavy fine and indefinite suspension.

One Offense Is Graver.

The only offense considered more serious than assaulting an umpire by the American League is betting on ball games by a player or "throwing" a game.

Almada, who has never been classed as an obstreperous player during his four years in the big leagues, apparently did not kick Quinn deliberately in the fifth inning today, when he stomped wildly about the plate in protest of a called third strike.

Realizing what he had done, Almada immediately made a gesture of apology to the umpire, but was banished from the game, nevertheless.

A factor that favors Almada's escape with a light penalty, if any, was the presence at the game of Tom Connolly, boss of all American League umpires. Connolly declared unofficially tonight that he did not believe Almada had intentionally kicked Quinn. Connolly may make a report to Harridge on his own account, in which case Almada may be absolved.

Report Due at Once.

President Harridge will receive Umpire Quinn's report of the incident tomorrow by telegraph, and both Almada and the Washington club will be notified immediately of the disciplinary action that is taken.

The Nats will seek their fourth straight victory tomorrow when Monte Weaver takes the mound against the Athletics. Weaver, who pitched seven creditable innings against the Yankees in his first start of the season, will be opposed by Lee Ross, clever young righthander.

Ross has victories over the Yankees and Red Sox to his credit and held Washington to seven hits in a start against the Nats last week.

Wes Ferrell, who disagreed with Umpire Quinn all afternoon on decisions at the plate, was booed at every excuse by the ladies' day fans and cash customers. On one occasion he advanced to the plate, shook his finger in Quinn's face and all but succeeded in getting himself thumbed out of the game.

Goose Goslin, a prime favorite around the league, was roundly applauded when he succeeded Almada in the Nats' outfield in the fifth inning. Goslin, despite his 37 years, is deemed a better defensive player than either of the rookie outfielders, Taft Wright or George Case.

The newest favorite of Philadelphia fans is Dario Lodigiani, the little Italian second baseman from the Coast. "Little DiMag," he is being called here since hitting home runs on three consecutive days against the Yankees.

Adamick Kayoes Bruce.

Workman Pilots High Velocity to Havre de Grace Victory

Leads Battle Of Jockeys For Honors

Favorite Pays $4.20 Ticket; Yellow Tulip Takes 2d Money.

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Havre de Grace, Md., April.—Unknown to the public for the most part, there is a jockey rivalry here bordering on a feud, with Sonny Workman and Al Shelhamer the principals. With the track offering a $500 split-second watch for the leading rider at this meeting, Workman and Shelhamer have been battling it out on the track in almost every start. There also are reports that the struggle might break out elsewhere.

When the rivals went to the post today, Workman, astride High Velocity, and Shelhamer up on Yellow Tulip, the press box anticipated a riding war, and such was the result. The boys confined their efforts strictly to jockeying and Workman succeeded in hanging a defeat on Shelhamer.

Workman, aboard the $4.20 favorite, drove to the wire three parts of a length in advance of his foe. Third in the field of six was Bootless. Three others formed the "also ran" department.

While Workman might have had the best horse, he also rode better than Shelhamer. He allowed the latter to take Yellow Tulip to the front and sat tight until the stretch run. Shelhamer saved ground entering the stretch, but so did Workman. At the top of the stretch straightaway, Workman cracked the colt on the flank with his whip and then went into as strong a hand ride as has been seen hereabouts to win going away.

The favorite players in the crowd of 10,000 cheered Workman lustily when he returned to the judges' stand.

A dead heat for second money marked the sixth race, won with ease by Mrs. F. Rossiter's Saidona. She finished two and a half lengths ahead of the deadlock between Tiempo and Hit and Run. Saidona hugged the fence at the final bend to get to the front and Jockey Seabo sat tight to the wire on the $10.40 winner.

Dian, a $5.10 shot, brought Sonny Workman his second winner of the program in the seventh race. The Washington rider brought the favorite home four lengths in advance of Grace Grier. Infilee was third.

Timetta, making the second effort of her career, scored in a thrilling photofinish in the third race. The Virginia-bred daughter of Timemaker won by a nose from Sun Girl, a hot tip, to bring her backers an $18.40 mutuel. Fictitious was third in the field of a dozen 2-year-olds operating at 4½ furlongs. Timetta took command on the outside in the first few yards and held on with dogged determination when Sun Girl made her belated dive for the wire.

The track barber always will believe that a customer who sat in his chair just before the second race cost him a $61.70 daily double. The barber had a ticket on the combination ending in Fyan and wanted to do some rooting, but he was tossing the lather at random while the race was being run. The "double" proved a private affair for Mrs. Helen Horst, of Charles Town, W. Va., Trainer E. Brining, of Hagerstown, Md., and Jockey Joe Wagner. After Timetta won the first race, the stable sent Icy Wind, a $7.80 shot, to victory in the second race. The veteran mare finished three lengths in front of Fyan, with Nellie Mc., a field horse, third.

Yomer, owned and operated by J. P. Jones, proved a winner the second time out this year by taking the third race from Equerry, owned by H. Rozier Dulaney, jr., of Washington, D. C. It was a battle between the pair from start to finish, with Yomer, under Maurice Peters' direction, drawing out on Equerry, with Workman up, in the final sixteenth. No Ending was third in the group of a dozen fair sprinters. The winner was a $5 favorite.

Sketchbook caused a mild surprise in the fourth race, the Magnolia Purse, by defeating Bunny Baby, second in the Louisiana Derby last winter. Apprentice Lucas Duppe saved ground with the winner and won in a gruelling stretch duel. Enrymion was a distant third. Sketchbook paid an $8.10 mutuel.

At The Post . . . .

With Bill Bennings.

Dear Al: Selections at Havre de Grace.

I know a close student of horse form who says that The Chief will finish ahead of Stagehand in the Kentcky Derby and furthermore he picks the former C. V. Whitney colt to win the main pot. Basil James has turned down an offer to ride The Chief, preferring to remain on the West Coast. Sonny Workman, true to his word, will ride Aneroid in the $10,000 race here Saturday. Yesterday I walked up to the ticket window, in Washington, to buy a round-trip ticket to the track. While the ticket seller was getting my ticket an elderly woman came up and asked, "Is this where you buy tickets for Boston?" The man behind the window replied, "Yes, madame (and then, turning to me) $3 please." The woman poked three bucks through the window and said, "Tuts-tut-so they have reduced the fare to Boston again. The poor railroads." The boys have nicknamed Eddie Smith, Washington rider, "Last Race" Smith due to his habit of bringing his mount home in front in the day's final. Like his fellow townsman, Workman, Eddie is in his best form and it looks like Charles Town, Hagerstown and Cumberland will have to get along without him this year. Jockey Pat McDermott reported sick and canceled his mounts for the day. Clocker Mike reported in good health but without funds.
BILL.

First race—I had to stand a lote of kidding when Turkish Brand ran last when I picked him as my best bet. That effort don't count in my book and I'm going to see him go for all the dough. Bay Stout and Town Car for the place and show.

Second race—Company Halt ran a smart race last out and will have Workman to do the booting. I'm forced to string along. Lady Elgin is suited by the field and in dangerous. Dare Bunny might do well if taken off the also-eligible list.

Third race—Prince Gale hasn't done much since being claimed at Bowie. However, this is a well-bred colt and I'm going to try to chase him home here. Star Struck performed nicely with maidens. Satin Marvel to outfoot the others.

Fourth race—It looks as though I'm trying to make it Workman-Vanderbilt day. However, I'm forced to take Red Pepper in this affair. Carnage ran well with better company and may get home in front of Hypocrite.

Fifth race—Abbots Hour looked like a short horse to me in that recent outing. That may have been the tightener for this. Silent Shot retains enough class to be a forward factor. Sun Antioch should be prominent.

Sixth race—Sought After, if not made too much use of in the early stages, will beat this gang. Miss Oak and Frank Brooke to take care of the others. If you can go for Clocker Mike's "dream hunch" drop a two-spot on Chase Him.

Seventh race—Braving Danger comes from a smart barn. Packs a load but is the class. Snobby Scamp and Miss Tiptoe to complete the money bracket.

Best bet—Turkish Brand.

Derby Workouts

Cincinnati, April 28 (AP).—A dark horse contender for the Kentucky Derby at Churchill Downs May 7 developed here today when Elooto, from the Blue Ridge Stable, ran a mile in 1:38.4.

Only one other horse in training has shown faster time. Herbert M. Wolfe's Lawrin ran the mile in 1:38 flat over the Louisville course Wednesday.

Elooto, bay colt by Pompey, out of St. Rica, is owned by William R. O'Toole, Chicago sportsman. He was shipped to River Downs from Hot Springs several weeks ago, and has been making daily workouts.

With Bill Ackerman.

The Post's All Outdoors Editor

Catches of hardheads have been made all along the Eastern Shore of Virginia and Maryland as far up as Tilghmans Island. Outside of being about a week early, just as it should be, for as far back as we can remember Eastern Shore fishing is from ten days to two weeks earlier than on the western shore.

ACKERMAN

Many boatmen are predicting the second week in May will find them biting good at Solomons and Point Lookout. We'll hazard a guess, that by that time the big ones will be taking the hook up the Patuxent in the neighborhood of Benedict.

Vincent Langley, skipper of a fine fleet of charter boats at Solomons, was out this week with Frank Springman and Leon Hopkins prospecting in the Honga River below the bridge. With borrowed bait they caught their first of the season. Some Eastern Shoremen had more than 200 to the boat.

There is no guarantee with this early fishing, for the hardhead in early May can be tempermental to a degree; but if you want to take a chance Vince's boats will be ready this week-end.

We note here for benefit of the many anglers who have fished Oregon Inlet with him, the death on Friday of Capt. L. L. Midgett. Mr. C. C. Lipp, who was to have fished with him last Saturday, brings us word that his brother will run the boat for the balance of this season.

Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker, head of Eastern Airlines and The Flying Fisherman Club, must have as the first requirement of the personnel, that they be fishermen of the highest degree, for they are just that.

Regardless of where they are, the fishing tackle is always along and used upon the slightest pretext, from Trindad and the Island of Tobago to Puerto Rico while vacationing on neighboring Pan-American routes. And if they hit, how they razz those who got no further than the end of the line at Miami, or were forced to find their fun along some Northern beach.

When some particular place is found that is productive beyond the ordinary, letters travel from one end of the line to the other with the news—so it is little to wonder, that anglers travel Eastern whenever possible.

The latest, from Supt. E. O. Bearden at Port of Spain to Bill Briggs, local traffic manager, is interesting to say the least, because we glean from it that the mouth of the Orinoco has good fishing during every month of the year, and for all the great sport fish found along the Florida coast.

The rules that will govern the casting events to be held at the 1939 New York World's Fair are fast being shaped up by the committee. Interesting, and intriguing—they are bound to bring to great numbers of anglers the elements of good fishing form, as well as the finest in equipment so that they will be interested in learning the knack of handling it and experiencing the delight of nature's greatest outdoor bounty.

The northeaster that started blowing along the North Carolina coast last Saturday morning, and so effectively put a damper on the week-end fishing of many local anglers, was spent by early Tuesday morning, so that the boats could get outside again on Wednesday. By that time, however, there were few parties to go out. In fact Capt. Sam Tillett had but one boat chartered, and they came in with 16 channel bass, many of them running close to or better than 50 pounds.

These fish supply some real sport—to our mind, every bit as much, as do the blues, if the tackle isn't too heavy. Probably not so spectacular, but until the blues do come in—not such a bad substitute.

As for the blues—still laying offshore about 15 miles below Oregon Inlet. The netters are hitting them every day they can get them, but the few taken some days ago by sportfishermen were very probably stragglers.

Ted Gardiner, who consistently fishes the deep water off Point Patience for stripers, caught a pair on Tuesday, the largest of which scaled better than 3 pounds.

This is a good place to try your luck any time, particularly if you like to fish from the beach.

Bill Lee Hurls Air-Tight Ball for Victory.

Chicago, April 28 (AP).—With Bill Lee pitching air-tight ball for eight innings, the Cubs easily outclassed the Reds, 12 to 5, today in the first of a two-game series.

The Cubs pounded Gene Schott, Ray Benge and Lloyd Moore for 15 hits, including a homer by Augie Galan, who drove in five of the Chicago runs.

The Cubs went into the ninth leading by 12 runs when Lee weakened and had to be removed. The Reds rallied to score five runs in the ninth on seven of their 14 hits, including Frank McCormick's home run.

Clay Bryant came to the rescue, however, and stopped the Reds before they could approach the Cubs run total.

Cumberland, Md., April 28.—Blasting four Fort Hill High pitchers for 16 hits and as many runs, Paw Paw (W. Va.) High's baseball tossers brushed aside the local Sentinels, 16-3, at Community Park for the second loss suffered by Fort Hill in as many games.

Varied Card Faces Teams Of District

Baseball, Tennis, Track Athletes Are Busy This Afternoon.

By Perry Wilkinson.

Western High entertains Anacostia and Eastern High plays host to Woodrow Wilson today in the second doubleheader of the inter-high series. Both games will start at 3:30 p. m.

In addition to these two tilts, four baseball games, and a tennis match will round out the local program, while Tech High School and Episcopal High, of Alexandria, Va., will send its track teams to Philadelphia to participate in the Penn Relays which get underway today at 2 p. m.

Central will attempt to redeem its loss against Roosevelt when it engages Briarly Military Academy on the Ammendale field. Bethesda-Chevy Chase meets Montgomery Blair in an important tussle at Silver Spring; Washington-Lee High tangles with the Maryland Frosh, at College Park, and Devitt Prep goes to Laurel to tackle Coach [illegible]our A. Jones' high school charges.

For the first time in the history of the meet, the Prep boys will not be entered against high school competitors. There will be a National Prep championship at stake as well as a National high school title. The participants will run in heats with the four fastest times qualifying for the finals tomorrow. At that time, the fastest three will be recorded for the purpose of determining the national champion.

This new set up will eliminate the possibility of comparing the local entrants. Episcopal will be running in the Prep division.

Getting back to the inter-high series, Eastern will be a heavy favorite to win over Wilson's nine. Coach Guyon's proteges, by winning over Episcopal, Navy Plebes, and Washington-Lee—three strong teams—are expected to remain at the top in the race for the public school crown.

Mike Eslin Stars.

Morris Clark softballers defeated the Treasury ten yesterday, 6 to 4, in a Sherwood League encounter on the Sherwood Playground. Mike (Diz) Eslin saved the day for the winners with a one-handed catch in the seventh inning that resulted in a triple play. The sacks were loaded at the time.

Departmental League Opens Its 1938 Baseball Season

Procurement Team Beaten

Labor Bureau Is Victor in 12-4 Game.

After the pregame ceremonies in which Ray Gilbert, administrative assistant of machine tabulation at the Bureau of Labor Statistics, demonstrated his pitching ability in tossing out the first ball, the Bureau of Labor nine went to work behind the effective hurling of Liggett and triumphed, 12-4, over Procurement Division's team in the opening game of the Departmental League on the East Ellipse yesterday.

With Wolfe, Stevens, Carnes and Wynne hitting timely, the Labor Bureau boys shoved across enough runs to nearly clinch the game in the first stanza. In the third, behind the same stick wielders, they actually sewed up the contest. While his chums were doing all this work, Liggett was doing all right by himself.

He did allow two runs in the third, but that was after his mates had put across six tallies. The seventh rolled around before Procurement was able to pry two more from him, but by this time they were as useless as an electric fan in Alaska. Liggett's 4-hit slab work today stamps him as one of the better sandlot flingers.

In the meantime, Procurement used three pitchers in an attempt to stem the batting attack of the winners. Twelve hits rattled to all parts of the lot, but it was mainly the top part of the batting order that was causing all the damage. Carnes, centerfielder of the Labor Bureau crew, was the hitting star in the 8-inning game.

Dickerson A. C. in Field.

The Dickerson A. C. has an open date Sunday it would like to fill. Manager Lloyd Jones can be reached at Beckeystown 40-F-13 before 6:30 p. m., and Poolesville 40-F-23 after that time.

Lewis, Ravenel Lead Advance

Reeve Lewis, who had two 68's to his credit this year over the Chevy Chase course, and Henry Ravenel, advanced to the third round of play for the French High Commission Cup yesterday at Chevy Chase, a round ahead of the remainder of the field.

Lewis, who went 21 holes before winning over W. G. Brantley in the first round, defeated Gen. I. J. Carr, 3 and 1, yesterday, while Ravenel was trouncing P. S. Ridsdale, 7 and 5.

Lewis is now co-favored to win the title, as John F. Brawner, one of the city's leading amateur linksmen, lost to E. A. Hickman, the one-hand putter, in a first-round encounter. Brawner played the layout in par of 69 and the match was all square at the end of 18 holes, but Hickman finally won on the twenty-seventh. Brawner gave seven handicap strokes on the first 18.

Walter Haight

"Long Boy" is the ace clocker for the country's largest racing paper concern. His judgment is highly respected on any subject relating to horses. He is a big giant of a fellow—quiet, and he must have the eyes of hawk. Years of checking workouts the country over have made him a keen observer and he is a walking file case of turf information.

HAIGHT.

His work consists of recording the morning trials of horses. Almost anyone with a good split-second watch can time a horse, after a fashion, but few can identify the horse. "Long Boy" is one of the few. This makes him rank high in his chosen work.

In the afternoon his only duty is to check the fractional time of the races. He gets the time at the quarter, the half, etc.

When the main show is on, "Long Boy" takes a place near the rail at the finish. He can see over the heads of most of the customers. He snaps his watch and observes the races. Generally with him are several other clockers, probably a horseman or two and possibly a jockey. This group discusses the race both before and after—just as the nonprofessionals do up in the stands.

Last Monday "Long Boy" and his group were in their regular position for the fourth race. The field got off. "Long Boy" clicked the time of the poles. Little Shaver came into the stretch on top. Jockey Shelhamer was riding him hard. On the outside came Isolator with Jockey Harry Richards pumping for all he was worth.

* * * *

On down to the wire they went. The two drove over the line. "Long Boy" and his friends had their eyes glued on the horses. With the race over, a trainer looked up at the clocker: "Well, 'Long,' who was it?"

"Isolator won it," said "Long Boy" in a matter-of-fact way.

They checked up on the others in the group. They agreed with "Long Boy."

"I think you are all wrong," came the voice of a stranger.

"Long Boy" and the others wheeled to face him. Who was this man who thought he knew more than they did?

"Just what did you say?" asked "Long Boy" determinedly. "If we are all wrong, what is it?"

"It's a dead heat," replied the stranger.

The clocker and his friends gave the stranger the cold shoulder and went on with their conclave. But the stranger moved around in front of them.

"Yes, it's a dead heat and, furthermore, they can't call it anything else," said the stranger. "I was looking at those horses when they hit the line and they both got there at the same time. Now, if that isn't a dead heat, I never saw a horse race in my life."

The "Photo Finish" sign was put into position.

* * * *

"Long Boy" and his friends looked the stranger over. He was about 35. He wore a dark suit, white shirt and white tie—surely not a race-track regular. Furthermore, there was some mud on his shoes, and it hadn't rained around Havre de Grace for many days. Just a countryman trying to be a big shot, thought "Long Boy."

"I said it was a dead heat and you'll know it soon," the stranger insisted.

"Bet!" the word came from "Long Boy" and company like a bar from the Anvil Chorus.

The stranger pulled out his roll and began taking all the wagers in sight, laying even money that it was a dead heat.

Now, in round numbers, there had been 50 photo finishes in Maryland without a dead heat this spring. In fact, two dead heats in a year, even since the camera came into use, are tops for the State.

Finally the stranger had every dollar within yards sewed up in the transaction.

The photograph, in its clip, slid down the wire from the photographer's penthouse. The judges scanned it. They held it up to the light. Then "Red" Palmer, who handles this duty, flashed the result to the board.

The man on the other side of the track picked up a big sign which read "Dead Heat."

"What did I tell you?" yelled the stranger as he pocketed the cash and then disappeared in the crowd.

"Long Boy" came into the press box a little later, shaking his head. After telling the story he said, "And just think, after 30 years around a race track I turns out to be a sucker for a Hill Billy!"

Bull Lea Defeats Menow, Redbreast In Bluegrass Race

Lexington, Ky., April 28 (AP).—Warren Wright's Bull Lea, a Kentucky Derby eligible, whipped three other Derby nominees today in winning the $5,000 added Bluegrass Stakes at Keeneland race Course. Menow was second, and Redbreast in the show spot. Both Menow, owned by Hal Price Headley, and Redbreast, from Mrs. Payne Whitney's Greentree Stables, are Derby eligibles.

Dah He, from Headley's Stables, also a Derby eligible, was the fourth horse in the race.

Bull Lea paid $3.20 as he set a new track record of 1:49 3-5 for the mile and one-eighth.

Noted Jockey Has Mount in Wood Classic

Pasteurized Is His Mount Saturday; Future Up to H. P. Headley.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 28.—Charley Kurtsinger and the Brookmeade Stable patched up their differences today, but the famous jockey in all probability will not ride in the Kentucky Derby, May 7. He will, however, pilot War Admiral in the match race against Seabiscuit at Belmont Park Decoration Day.

After notifying the Jamaica stewards that Kurtsinger had been restored to good standing, Trainer Hugh Fontaine, of the Brookmeade Stable, said the "Flying Dutchman's" services would be needed on Derby day to ride the stable's Handcuff in the Pimlico Oaks. Brookmeade's Traffic Light is eligible for the Derby but will not start.

Kurtsinger indicated he still had hopes of riding Hal Price Headley's Menow in the Derby.

Matter Not Settled.

"That's a matter that has got to be worked out," said Kurtsinger. "Mr. Headley wants me and I sure would like to be on Menow's back for I think he is going to be a mighty tough horse to beat."

The veteran Louisville jockey will return to the saddle Saturday and probably will ride Mrs. W. P. Stewart's Pasteurized in the Wood Memorial at Jamaica.

Menow caused all the trouble in the first place. Kurtsinger acted against stable orders by going to Keeneland to ride the Headley colt in his 3-year-old debut, April 15. Fontaine refused permission because several Brookmeade horses were running at Jamaica the same day.

Menow Causes Trouble.

Kurtsinger won the race with Menow and was back in Jamaica the next day but Fontaine suspended him for disobedience, after consulting Mrs. Dodge Sloane, owner of the stable.

If he does not ride in the Derby, Kurtsinger will miss an opportunity to tie Earl Sande and Isaac Murphy at three winners each. Charley set a Derby record of 2:01 4-5 with Twenty Grand in 1931 and won last year with The Admiral in 2:03 1-5, the second fastest time in Derby history.

John "Red" Pollard, Seabiscuit's regular jockey, arrived at Belmont Park today and was immediately hoisted into the Biscuit's saddle for a slow gallop of a mile and a quarter. Pollard's collarbone, broken in a spill at Santa Anita last February, has mended completely.

War Admiral worked a brisk half-mile in 47 3-5 and eased up to 5 furlongs in 1:01 3-5.

Cecil Travis has learned to play shortstop and Buddy Lewis at this writing is the best third baseman in either league . . . The two rookie lefthanders, Chase and Krakauskas, haven't been needed as yet, which is all right . . . If that Bonura-Kuhel trade brings dividends, the Nats will indeed be tough.

CLEVELAND—The suspicion is that Oscar Vitt is building himself up for a terrific let down . . . Unless the Indians cure that habit of going sour when they come East . . . but Bobby Feller seems to have arrived . . . he may have to get used to pitching on weekdays rather than Sunday's, however . . . The Indians were not a good ball club last year, and the only changes are in the management, at third base and behind the bat . . . it will be a terrific blow to Steve O'Neill's reputation if Vitt takes the club anywhere . . . Cleveland teams have set the pace, and you know what has happened.

DETROIT—The Tigers have a lot of ground to make up with the season only 11 days old . . . and folks are beginning to wonder if they weren't a bit too hasty in accepting Rudy York as a really dangerous hitter . . . The Tigers' vaunted power has yet to display itself . . . There is a little mattter of pitching, also, that is troubling the Tigers . . . and Gerald Walker would look nice in that Detroit outfield, which is probably the worst hitting outfield in the league, Connie Mack's excepted . . . Gehringer, Greenberg and York could take the club places if they start hitting . . . if . . . but those Tiger pitchers need plenty of working margin, because the fact is Detroit got the poorest pitching of any club in the league in 1937, with the possible exception of the Browns.

CHICAGO—The White Sox must be sighing for the return of Zeke Bonura, despite the fact he has been no hitting sensation with Washington . . . He always hit at Comiskey Field . . . Joe Kuhel is treating 'em to his fancy fielding, but isn't doing justice to fifth place in the batting order . . . The hits Kuhel has made since the season started can be counted on the fingers of one hand . . . and Manager Jimmy Dykes is about convinced that Bozie Berger will never learn to hit curve ball pitching . . . He's only a stop-gap until Luke Appling returns to harness . . . but that may not be until August . . Dykes knows what he needs mostly—pitching. That's why he is trying to buy Buck Newsom from the Browns.

Orioles Lose Carl Fischer

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Md., April 28—The Orioles won a costly 11-4 victory from Toronto today to make it two straight in the series.

In the fourth inning Pitcher Carl Fischer was hit on the right forearm by a pitched ball, and suffered a fracture that will keep him out of the game for six weeks. Leo Norris, second baseman, pulled up with a charley horse and may be out several days.

Bill Ehrensberger, relieving Fischer, allowed only two hits in five innings. Porter and Weintraub hit homers.

Hart Winner In Golf Play

Jerry Hart, General Accounting Office employe and former star amateur golfer from Arkansas, played Indian Spring in 72 strokes yesterday, to top a large field in the all-Government tourney of the National Federation of Federal Employes, Local No. 2.

Hart deducted a 5 handicap from his 1 over par score for a net 67 and the prize in the class of 2 to 11 handicaps. The 12 to 18 handicap division was topped by S. W. Crostwait, Veterans' Administration, with 85-15, 70, while J. Mullikin, navy yard, paced the 19 to 30 handicap class with 95-30, 65.

Hart tied with K. M. Skaggs, of the Treasury Department, in the driving contest, each with a 300-yard clout, while L. Kreamer, Labor, won the pitching contest, laying the ball 2 feet from the cup from 50 yards.

Hart, who has confined his local playing to the Capitol course, played the nines in 36 each, one over and even par, respectively, and won a set of matched irons, the top prize.

time in the ring after the whistle trying to settle the issue. They toppled to the concrete near the end of their 30-minute time allotment and raised such a rumpus the coppers threatened to back the "Black Maria" right into Mr. Turner's establishment and carry off everybody—including the ticket-takers.

Both matches ran the gamut of good and bad fouling. Jacobs started working on Sanooki's rotund figure in a hurry, hardly waiting for Bortnick to finish his instructions before he was on the Indian, kicking him in the tummy. He got Sanooki out of the ring, tossed Bortnick aside when he tried to get the Redskin back into the ring, and when Benny insisted on doing his duty, threw him out on top of the prostrate Sanooki. The chief, however, finally pulled Jacobs halfway through the ropes, then climbed in and squashed him into defeat.

In the other matches, Chief Thunderbird went 30 minutes to a draw with Rhu Pinder; Dick Braddock, an Alexandria boy, tossed Al Norcus with a backdrop in 21 minutes, and Lou Bacigalupi pinned Ivan Vacturoff with a crotch hold and body slam in 17 minutes.

Indians Win Over Browns To Hold Lead

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, April 28.—Lyn Lary's home run at the start of the game set the tempo for the two-and-one-half-hour contest the Cleveland Indians won from the St. Louis Browns today, 11 to 6.

There were three other circuit blows, two by Indians, and eight other hits which went for extra bases, as the rampaging Tribe maintained its lead of the American League.

It was not all easy sailing for Cleveland. The Browns, a battling crew inspired by a new manager, Gabby Street, just as Cleveland's new boss, Oscar Vitt, has injected new life into the Indians, tied the score with a four-run fourth inning. But after that they could drive in only one run with five hits. Twice batters tripled and were stranded.

Temperamental Johnny Allen, Cleveland hurler who won 15 and lost 1 last year, was ejected by Umpire McGowan in the fourth when Allen objected too strenuously on a pitch McGowan ruled as a ball.

Vito Tamulis, the Browns' left-handed rookie from Montreal, was relieved by Ed Cole in the seventh. Linke was the third Browns' pitcher, taking the mound for the ninth inning.

A strong wind sweeping Sportsman's Park aided the batters. Keltner's long hit in the second was headed foul but was blown into fair territory and went for a triple.

Giants Beat Boston, Take First Place

By the Associated Press.

Boston, April, 28.—Bill Terry's New York Giants climbed into sole possession of first place in the National League today by nosing out the Bees, 4 to 2, behind Hal Schumacher's five-hit flinging.

Hank Leiber sewed up the game in the first inning when he walloped his third home run of the season with two mates on base. After that it was more or less of a breeze for Prince Hal to post his second straight win.

The victory boosted the Giants' winning streak to eight straight and put them a full game in front of the Pittsburgh Pirates.

The Bees made only one offensive gesture—in the third, when a walk, Lou Chiozza's error and Elbie Fletcher's 400-foot triple accounted for the only two Boston runs. Both were unearned through Chiozza's fumble, which spoiled a shoutout for "Schumie."

Southpaw Bob Weiland, who trimmed Pittsburgh five times last season, held the Buccaneers well in check during the early part of the game but was relieved in the eighth after Arky Vaughan belted out his second home run in two days.

Dodgers Defeat Phillies, 6 to 3

By the Associated Press.

Brooklyn April 28.—The Dodgers mixed timely hitting with effective pitching today and whipped the Phillies, 6 to 3.

Bucky Walters went the route for the Phils, but his wildness and the fact that he couldn't stop the Brooklyn hitting "in the clutches" lost the game for him. Luke Hamlin started for the Dodgers and was credited with the victory when the Dodgers put on a three-run rally to put the game on ice in the fifth.

Bull Lea Beats Menow Again

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Warren Wright's crack 3-year-old gained top ranking for the Kentucky Derby yesterday when he beat Menow, Hal Price Headley's Derby nominee, by a neck to win the $5,000 added one-and-one-eighth Bluegrass Stakes at Keeneland. Bull Lea set a track record.

Are Box Fighters Superstitious? Have a Look at Georgie Abrams!

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Superstition's serio-comic head has reared itself in the humid Huron gym for a leer or two at George Abrams and his coterie as the District middleweight preps for his bout with Boston Johnny O'Boyne Monday night. More superstition abounds around the stuffy little gym than existed during the Middle Ages, and George's training is conducted in ritualistic fashion.

Next to baseball players, perhaps, ringmen are the most superstitious sect of athletes in business. Their idiosyncrasies range all the way from concealing horseshoes in their mittens—for luck of course—to putting "Mickey Finns" in opponents' water-buckets. If they win a fight or score a knockout, no stone is left unturned to have everything arranged for the next fight just as it was when victory perched on their banner. Some have gone so far as to book the same opponent they put the chill on.

Abrams, in this instance, hasn't been rematched with a previous opponent, but has done the next best thing by obtaining Howard Scott as a training partner. Scott, District lightweight champion, worked with George when the latter was getting ready to fight Jimmy Jones two weeks ago, and Abrams credits much of his success in the bout to the arrangement. So much did he like it that when it came time to peel of his coat and buckle down to hard work for the O'Boyne business he refused to start unless Scott could be obtained to train with him.

Scott's Experience Helps.

Thus far the arrangement has worked out satisfactorily, and Abrams has benefited by the veteran's experience. Scott still punches rather hard with his right and is not too old to make George step around and keep his distance. Consequently, Abrams' boxing has been brought up to par in jigtime after a two-weeks lay-off that left him a trifle rusty.

But Abrams' superstition extends beyond Scott and sparring. Manager Syd Fishel purchased his charge a new pair of trunks, but George left them hanging in his locker in preference for the old—the ones he trained in for the Jones' fight. The same men who helped him around the gym during that time, hangers-on who handled a bucket or sponge, are doing the same chores as he works for O'Boyne. He's even leaving his socks free and losoe around the shoetops, although he used to roll them down neatly.

Fishel Superstitious, Too.

Fishel doesn't care how far Abrams goes with his little supertitions, as long as he wins fights, but even Syd has his pet omens and aversions. He was saying yesterday as how George should win Monday night because the weather seemed so favorable.

"Remember how hot it was when he was training for the second fight with Jones? Well, it's just as hot this week, and that means only one thing—George will be just as hot as the night he beat Jones."

Maybe so, but we'll have to wait and see what Mr. O'Boyne thinks of all this business. One good sock on the button can ruin anybody's pet superstition.

Bank Credits Should Flow, Reilly Holds

Bankers Must Respond to Day's Needs, Says 2d National's President.

The responsibility of the banking profession in adopting progressive credit methods to meet the business problems of today was reviewed by John A. Reilly, president of the Second National Bank, in an address before the Cosmopolitan Club at the Carlton Hotel yesterday.

"Banking is a business like any other enterprise," he said. "Such institutions represent a very definite need which was responsible for their creation. Just because institutions become firmly established in a given community, they should not disintegrate into a useless, cold, colorless piece of financial machinery. Bankers must, if they are to perform faithfully the sacred trusts of their office, awaken to the needs of our day and represent the living developing forces of our times.

"Social and economic changes are inevitable in a rapidly moving civilization. They are positive signs of growth and not decay. The fear of innovation on the part of the banker should be a thing of the past. He must adapt himself to the changing times.

"Credit should be extended where the borrower is deserving. Bank credit, if properly used, should be a flowing stream and not a stagnant pool."

He reminded his hearers, however, that "no banker should permit himself to forget that his credit risks will cause ultimate substantial losses unless the fundamentals of credit granting are adhered to."

Excess Reserve Up 90 Million

By the Associated Press.

Lendable excess reserves of the Nation's banks increased $90,000,000 to $2,580,000,000 in the week ended April 27, the Federal Reserve Board said yesterday.

The increase was due primarily to distribution of the Treasury's new $1,400,000,000 cash resource as the result of the desterilization of gold.

The board also reported that the 12 Federal Reserve banks sold $21,000,000 worth of Treasury bonds in the week, continuing the effort begun last week to prevent Treasury bond prices from rising too high as the result of President Roosevelt's spending-lending-credit program. The banks replenished their investment portfolios with $13,000,000 of Treasury notes and $8,000,000 of Treasury bills.

Nuelle to Succeed Leonor F. Loree

New York, April 28 (AP).—Delaware & Hudson Co. announced today that Joseph H. Nuelle, who has resigned as president of the Lehigh Coal & Navigation Co., would be elected president of the corporation and its subsidiaries at the annual meeting on May 10. He will succeed as president of the D. & H. Co., Leonor F. Loree, veteran railroader who resigned recently because of ill health.

As head of the D. & H. Nuelle will resume a long railroad career which was interrupted by his brief term as president of Lehigh Coal & Navigation. He retired as president of the New York, Ontario & Western Railroad last year. He started with that system in 1907 as an assistant engineer. Like the Delaware & Hudson Railroad, the O. & W. is a large carrier of anthracite coal.

Wheat Rallies After Hitting Four-Year Low

Reduction of Open May Contracts Brings Support to Prices,

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, April 28.—Helped by rapid reduction shown in uncompleted May contracts here, Chicago wheat prices averaged higher today, but only after establishing a four-year bottom record.

Latest figures indicated curtailment of the open interest in May wheat here had totaled 1,734,000 bushels in 24 hours. May wheat will become deliverable starting next Monday, and much evening-up of speculative accounts was a consequence. Absorption of futures offerings broadened on price declines.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were unchanged to ⅜ higher than yesterday's finish; May, 80⅞ to 81; July, 80⅛ to 80¼. Corn, ¼ off to ⅛ up; May, 58⅛ to 58¼; July, 60⅛. Oats at ⅛ decline to ⅛ advance; rye, exactly unchanged, and provisions 2 to 7 cents setback.

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Reserve Board reported yesterday that last week's loans to brokers and dealers on securities held by reporting member banks in New York City totaled $516,000,000. The week ended Wednesday and the total represented an increase of $20,000,000 when compared with the previous week.

Loans for the corresponding week a year ago totaled $1,102,000,000.

New York, April 28 (AP).—Sale of a New York Stock Exchange seat for $62,000, off $1,000 from the previous transaction, was arranged today.

The top price for the year, made January 12, was $75,000 and the low $52,000 on March 30.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively,
A Special Correspondent.

Stocks Decline in Slack Trading; Bonds and Commodities Irregular.

New York, April 28.—Financial markets continued dull. Stocks retreated further with leading issues giving up 1 to 3 points. Lowest prices were reached toward the close. Sales volume was around 550,000 shares, the largest of the week. United States bonds were uncertain and commodities were mixed. May wheat closed one-eight of a cent higher at 81 cents.

Group movements in stocks were mostly downward. Agricultural and chemical stocks were more erratic than other sections, but declines of 1 to 3 points took place. Harvester, which has attracted attention with its recent nervousness, opened 2¾ points lower. Case gave up nearly as much on a few sales. Allied Chemical dipped 3 points and du Pont was unable to hold around par, its initial price. Airplane shares lost the previous day's altitude.

Dividends a Factor.

Motor stocks receded small fractions, although Chrysler was forced down 2 points. U. S. Steel and Bethlehem drifted lower after a firm start. They showed losses of a point or so in the last hour. Standard Oil, Standard of Indiana and Texas took large cuts, helped by the admission by President Seubert of Indiana that the oil supply was much too large.

Railroad shares were not helped by the movement for wage reductions. Santa Fe lost a point. Chesapeake & Ohio continued to show a steadier tone. Rensselaer & Saratoga, an inactive stock, lost 5 points and sold at a new low record price. Dividend suspensions accounted for rather severe losses in a number of stocks. Payment omission was announced by at least a dozen companies with shares listed on the Stock Exchange in the past two days. Among the issues affected today were Container, Fairbanks Morse and Kayser. Dividend omissions were announced late yesterday for Armstrong Cork, Butler Brothers, Chicago Mail Order and Campbell Wyant. General Electric and Westinghouse sank 1 to 2 points. Sutherland Paper lost more than 2 points on the first sale. U. S. Gypsum had a thin market. Western Union softened.

On the Curb Exchange the trading was similar to that of the Stock Exchange, except duller, if anything. Price changes were small and mostly in a downward direction. A dozen inactive issues suffered wide losses, ranging from 1 to 6 points. The reverse split shares of Cities Service common began with a fractional gain. Other issues of the company were mixed. Aluminum, Ltd., lost three points on the proposal to pay dividends in stock. General Tire preferred duplicated its lowest price of the year. Sherwin-Williams, Nehi, and Lion Oil retreated. Mead-Johnson and Pepperell improved. Money markets were soft. Foreign exchanges were marked by another decline in French currency.

National Income.

The Department of Commerce estimates a 5.4 per cent drop in national income in first quarter as compared with last year. Business profits were said to be about the same as last year. Lacking details of the method of figuring the income, it is difficult to criticize the findings, but it is certain that real income has fallen much more than 5 per cent. Production and business activity as measured by the Federal Reserve Board's index averaged 116 per cent of the 1923-25 average. In the first three months of this year the index averaged 79½, a drop of nearly 33 per cent—and production is the true measure of income.

General Foods.

Sharp declines are being used to figure the price that should be put on General Foods preferred stock, public offering of which is tentatively set for next Wednesday. Although the dividend rate has not been officially announced, what every one has in mind is $4.50, which is the rate on Standard Brands preferred. The latter stock is the favorite basis of comparison among statisticians. Most of them think General Foods preferred should be worth more than Standard Brands. Meanwhile a strong preliminary demand is developing, without solicitation. The offering will consist of 150,000 shares.

Treasury June Notes.

The Government bond market does not now believ that the $618,000,000 Treasury notes falling due at the June tax date will be paid off with proceeds of desterilized gold. If it did it would not be quoting the June notes at 101 9-32, which is 29-32ds less than a zero yield. In other words buyers at present prices are not only foregoing any return, but are actually paying 29-32ds of a point for the privilege of subscribing to whatever the Treasury offers in June in exchange for the maturing notes. The Treasury will redeem in cash, out of income tax payments, it is expected, the $250,000,000 Treasury bills which fall due on June 16, 17 and 18. In the interim it is expected to refund only a portion of maturing bill issues, using desterilized gold to retire some of each weekly maturity without recourse to refunding.

Odd Lots.

"Stock Exchange May Ease Listing Requirements," says newspaper headline. How? . . . This is an age of ease: easier prices the easy way in fiscal policy, the easy conscience in Government. . . . Weren't those happy days back in the springtime of 1937?. . . Too bad the sight of sprouting business frightened the economic farmers at Washington. . . . Curb officials make light of the internal dissension now in progress. Opponents of the present management say that the committee appointed to study reorganization was made up entirely of "old guarders" and that the recent appointment of an advisory committee was forced by the "insurgents." The Curb has two committees studying reorganization and a third studying whether commission rates should be revised. This committee is expected to recommend higher commissions and might make its report within a week or two.

Delaware & Hudson.

The report that Delaware & Hudson, after its new president comes in, would dispose of the remainder of its New York Central stock took on because it sounded a good thing to do. The whole deal did not have its origin in investment. It grew out of a maneuvering game in which the prizes were railroad ambitions and jobs rather than investment or consolidations. Delaware & Hudson raised a goodly sum of money by mortgaging its coal properties and put the funds into Lehigh Valley and Wabash. Whether that was done to drive a bargain with the Pennsylvania and the New York Central, or merely because President Loree of the D. & H. had a hunch that the Pennsylvania stockholders would take the stock is a story which some day may be told.

Bethlehem Keeps in Black For Quarter

Plan to Buy United Shipyards for $9,320,000 Is Announced.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 28.—After a meeting of directors of Bethlehem Steel Corp. today Eugene G. Grace, president, revealed for the first time details of a plan to acquire the business of United Shipyards, Inc. He said the entire matter would be in shape by early next week to propose to United Shipyards stockholders. The transaction, he disclosed, calls for a cash payment of $9,320,000.

Directors declared the regular dividends on its 7 per cent and 5 per cent preferred stock and reported a decline in net income for the March quarter to $994,908, compared with $8,293,833 in the like period a year ago.

Net income for the March quarter this year was equal to 93 cents a share on the 7 per cent preferred and 13 cents a share on the 5 per cent preferred. In the first quarter last year net was equal to $2.01 a share on the common stock, after allowing for preferred dividends.

Operating Rate 34.6%.

Net income for the first quarter was equal to 53 per cent of the quarterly dividend requirement on the two classes of preferred stock. The dividends were $1.75 on the 7 per cent preferred and 25 cents on the 5 per cent preferred, both payable July 1 to holders of record June 3.

The rate of operations of company plants during the first quarter averaged 34.6 per cent of capacity compared with 45.7 per cent in the preceding quarter and 87.1 per cent in the initial quarter last year. Currently operations are at 35 per cent against 32 per cent at the end of the March quarter and 98 per cent at this time a year ago. Eugene G. Grace, president, estimated that the "break even" point in regard to profits is between 35 and 40 per cent of capacity.

Grace estimated the value of orders on hand on March 31 was $99,934,192 compared with $93,470,063 at the end of 1937 and $151,061,818 on March 31, 1937. He said the unfilled orders increase was entirely accounted for by new shipbuilding business. He added that both the steel business and the shipbuilding division were in the black for the first quarter.

Cerro de Pasco $5.18.

Cerro de Pasco Copper Co. earned $5,817,619, equal to $5.18 per share in 1937, it was announced today. This compares with a net profit of $3,797,426, equal to $3.38 a share, in 1936. Production of copper at the company's mines, all located in Peru, totaled 75,094,065 pounds in 1937, compared with 71,482,600 in 1936.

Indiana Standard $3.66.

Chicago, April 28 (AP).—Standard Oil Co. of Indiana and subsidiaries reported today net income for 1937 of $55,950,784 after provision for all expenses, taxes, depreciation and other charges. The amount was equal to $3.66 on each of 15,267,030 shares of stock outstanding. The 1936 net was $46,883,448, or $3.09 a share.

Clearings Rise Sharply Above Previous Week

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 28.—Although rising sharply from the total of the preceding week, volume of bank clearings for the current period was smaller than in the corresponding week a year earlier for the twenty-fourth straight time. The year-to-year decline, however, was less severe than for any weekly period since early last November.

Heavy transactions reported for New York, which showed an increase over the corresponding total of the year previous for the first time since the week of October 20, last, were wholly responsible for the improved exhibit this week for the country as a whole.

Total clearings for 22 leading cities of the United States for the week ended Wednesday, April 27, according to Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., amounted to $5,379,815,000, a drop of only 3.8 per cent from the comparative 1937 figure of $5,589,821,000. This contrasted with a decline of 18.6 per cent in the similar comparison for the week previous.

New York clearings expanded to $3,574,422,000 from $3,345,072,000 a year ago, giving a rise of 6.9 per cent. Outside of New York, however, the turnover was only $1,805,393,000, or 19.6 per cent less than the $2,244,749,000 reported last year.

Foreign Markets.

By the Associated Press

London, April 28.—Tobacco, shipping and liquors shares lead the upturn in the stock market today, but final quotations were below the best prices. The giltedged division was well supported with oils and rubbers in good demand. Transatlantic securities reacted after early firmness and finished fractions to a point below Wednesday's finals. Home rails and foreign bond remained quiet.

Paris—Active trading took place at the close of the bourse although price changes were mixed. The international group attracted a good demand and Royal Dutch and Suez Canal issues finished with gains of about 100 francs. Rentes registered gains of 10 to 100 centimes and the industrials were generally higher.

Liverpool—Cotton futures declined under hedge selling against outside growths and other offerings credited to Bombay and Egyptian accounts. Final prices were off 5 to 7 points. Reports of Italy inquiring for Argentine wheat caused futures to steady, and final prices were ¼d higher to ⅛d net lower. Earlier in the day the market was off as much as ⅛d.

Welles Urges Co-operation in Latin-America

Acting Secretary of State Addresses Dinner of Coffee Bureau.

Sumner Welles, Acting Secretary of State, last night urged United States co-operation with the Latin-American coffee-producing countries, and warned that nations attempting economic self-sufficiency were likely to seek "military adventure" outside their frontiers.

Welles spoke at a dinner of the Pan-American Coffee Bureau held at the Pan-American Building. Diplomats from Latin-American countries and 200 American industrialists were present.

Pointing out that foreign trade was "the life blood of national prosperity," Welles declared that while "progress toward national economic self-sufficiency may create an illusion of national power and security, that illusion is inevitably purchased with the price of a constant deterioration of living standards."

"A nation finding itself in such conditions," he said, "becomes caught in a vicious circle, the issue from which is too frequently sought in military adventure outside its frontiers, in war of aggrandizement and aggression—which, in the end, exacts a fearful toll of suffering and destruction, not alone from the countries immediately involved, but from the world as a whole."

Welles said coffee was considered almost a necessity in the United States and pointed out that since Americans "naturally prefer" the better grades they welcomed efforts of coffee growers to improve the quality. Emphasizing that this country placed no restriction on the importation of coffee, he asserted Latin-American markets would be bettered for the United States as their coffee export trade increased.

His speech was broadcast over a short-wave hook-up to Latin-American countries. For the benefit of listeners there, it was translated into Spanish and Portugese.

Other speakers were T. Seydel Vaca, chairman of the Pan American Coffee Bureau; George H. Davis, president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, and G. W. Sharp, chairman of the Associated Coffee Industries of America. Music was furnished by an orchestra and Lucy Monroe, soprano.

Three Lawyers Make History Here

Underwood & Underwood.

These three lawyers, all members of the same family, made history yesterday when they were admitted to practice before the United States Supreme Court. They are J. Reed Cheseldine (right), his son, J. Corbin Cheseldine (left), and the tlder man's brother, W. Marshall Cheseldine. A short time later J. Reed Cheseldine was taken into custody by United States marshals, accused of laxity in alimony payments. His divorced wife, it was reported, learned of his whereabouts through newspaper stories.

Ex-Policeman Says He Slew Numbers Aide in Self-Defense

Hook Testifies Victim Threatened Him in Row Over Pay-Off; Deal for Racket Operation Bared in Court at Upper Marlboro.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Upper Marlboro, Md., April 28.—Thomas H. Hook, husky former District policeman, testified at the courthouse here tonight that he shot and fatally wounded Samuel Jeffries, colored gambler and cafe operator, in a Washington numbers war.

Hook, who, with two co-defendants—Fred Schinman and Frank Guy, colored—is being tried on a charge of murder, admitted he sent a bullet into Jeffries' body the night of September 30.

Jeffries "welched" on paying off and threatened to kill him, Hook testified. He added he shot in self-defense when the colored man reached for a pistol and that he aimed at the victim's right arm.

"Schinman and I met two months before this all happened," said Hook. "We went into business together—numbers business.

"We contacted Jeffries, and went to his house in Washington, where we struck a deal. He said he was too busy to handle the numbers business himself—so he turned it over to us. We agreed to give him 30 per cent and pay him 600 to 1 on every 'hit.'

Guy also took the stand tonight. He denied any connection with the crime, and Hook substantiated this testimony by asserting he never had seen Guy until he faced him in the courtroom here yesterday.

As the State rested its case this afternoon Hook was named as the slayer of Jeffries, colored, by a witness. Margaret Johnson, who was in the Garden Night Club before the shooting, testified she saw Hook pull his gun and shoot Jeffries outside the club the night of September 30.

The Johnson woman added she had been present the night before when a plot to kill Jeffries was "hatched."

Hostile Ballot Won't Cost Job, Hopkins Avers

'Any Political Influence' in WPA Not Tolerated, He Declares.

By the United Press.

Works Progress Administrator Harry Hopkins in one of his infrequent press conferences, yesterday promised relief workers that they may vote as they please without fear of losing their jobs and that "any political influence in WPA" will not be tolerated.

Replying to charges that WPA is being used for political purposes in Pennsylvania and Florida, he reiterated what he termed a long-standing WPA policy:

"We don't care how a WPA worker votes and he won't lose his job in any case."

[At Jacksonville, Fla., Malcolm Miller, Southern States field representative of the Works Progress Administration, reported he found "no evidence of the abuse" of the powers of the Florida administrator to employ nonrelief personnel, the Associated Press reported. Miller made an investigation of State relief activities after Representative J. Mark Wilcox protested the employment of Mrs. R. L. Dowling, wife of the Florida conservation commissioner, as district supervisor of a tourist survey project. Miller said his investigation was completed.—Editor's note.]

He said that if any WPA supervisor is found guilty of intimidation of project workers, or coercion in any manner, he will be "fired at once."

"Politicians have nothing to do with me," Hopkins said. "I guarantee to protect every WPA worker in the country from getting fired should be vote as he pleases." He added that the Amrican public "does not like political interference" in its relief, and "I don't intend to let those babies operate on me."

DON WINSLOW OF THE NAVY—

Twelve Hours

By Frank V. Martinek
Lieut. Comdr. U. S. N. R.

HOLY SOCKS! IS THE SPY MENACE IN THE UNITED STATES THAT BAD, DON?
GEE! WHERE DO THEY ALL COME FROM?
EVERYWHERE! THE RING-LEADERS COMB ALL NATIONS FOR HUMAN RATS WHO WILL COMMIT SABOTAGE FOR MONEY-
THE ADMIRAL ORDERS US TO LEAVE FOR WASHINGTON IN TWELVE HOURS--MAN! IF WE CAN ONLY LAY OUR HANDS ON THE SCORPION BEFORE THEN!

Bob Burns Says—

It must be wonderful to be able to write books that will benefit and influence mankind.

The other day I attended a Hollywood party given in honor of a famous author. One young fella come up and introduced himself to the author and said "I have just finished readin' a book that you wrote before you were married, and you made love sound so beautiful that I have decided to get married myself."

The author said "What was the name of the book?" The young fella said "Love's Perfect Dream." The author said "Well, you wanta read the book I wrote since I got married—it's called "The Awakening."
